Spring Fair Sees Record Participation

EVA MARTIN
Maryland Correspondent

WEST FRIENDSHIP, MD — The lawns of the Howard County Fair provided an excellent place to hold this year's Wills Spring 4-H-FFA Fair. Families brought their lawn chairs, blankets and picnics to watch an exciting show.

The Wills Fair, one of two regional spring livestock shows for Maryland 4-H-FFA members, is named in honor of the late Richard N. Will, who for more than fifty years provided leadership that enabled hundreds of youth and adults to participate in agricultural related activities.

This year proved to be the largest in Wills Fair history, with 16 Ayrshires, 19 Brown Swiss, 40 Guernseys, 108 Holsteins, 23 Jerseys, and 1 Milking Shorthorn entered.

One hundred twenty-seven 4-H and FFA youth from 6 counties paraded their animals before judges Cam Davis and Bonnie Remsberg.

OCS Dairy Phils Candy exhibited by Crystal Smith was selected SUPREME CHAMPION of the show.

Judges Remsberg and Davis selected O. Clay Smith Champion of all Color Breeds in Fitting and Showing.

Bonnie worked with the youth showing colored breeds for two hours carefully selecting the champion showman of each breed. Equally as hard for Cam Davis was the selection of a champion showman for the Holstein breed.

Both judges spent time with each individual youth, giving suggestions and helpful hints to be better show persons.

Family Picnic, Activities Highlight Summer Get-Together

NINE POINTS (Lancaster Co.) — An ominous feeling of being alone, isolated and different is becoming more characteristic of members of farm families in developing rural areas, according to John and Barbara Brubaker.

But they have a cure for it — participation in a spring Lancaster Holstein Association farm family picnic.

The young couple, parents of two boys and two girls, run a 70-head registered Holstein dairy farm that is tucked back among some farm hills, at the end of a long lane, just northeast of Nine Points.

They have 136 acres of privacy they want to share.

The couple is serving as host of the 1990 Lancaster Holstein Association Field Day (family picnic) and any Holstein breeder, of regis-

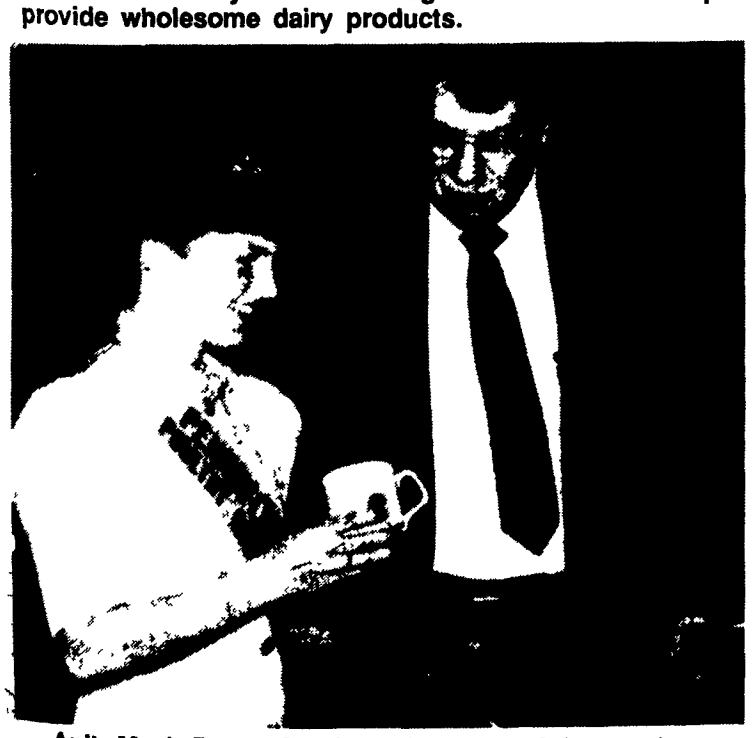
Special Dairy Issue Next Week

June is dairy month. And next Saturday, Lancaster Farming will again publish an annual dairy issue. Many advertisers will have special messages for you and you'll find a whole herd of dairy recipies that came in response to the drawing for model cows.

In addition, for the first time, the DHIA member newsletter will be part of this issue. And the goals and highlights of the Pennsylvania Holstein Association will also be featured.

On-farm interviews include a visit to the tallest silo east of the Mississippi River and a farm family who works with a small herd, but keeps production high enough to make a good profit.

These are only a few of the special features, along with our regular markets and columns, you'll find next week as a tribute to the dairy farmers and agri-businesses who help provide wholesome dairy products.



Anita Meck, Pennsylvania poultry queen, left, was given a special appreciation award by PEMA. Presenting the award is Bob Trout, PEMA president.

Rye May Absorb Excess Nitrogen

ANDY ANDREWS

HALIFAX (Dauphin Co.) — During the "winter window," farmers should think about planting rye as one method to absorb nitrogen on their farmland. Rye will grow when temperatures are cooler, is a a good cover crop, and can be used as a forage crop, according to the Rodale Institute and Penn State University.

Leon Weber, on-farm specialist with Rodale, is working with Les E. Lanyon, associate professor of soil fertility at Penn State. The researchers are trying to determine the effects that rye, as a winter crop, has on reducing the amount of nitrogen in the soil. The researchers also want to see how rye affects subsequent corn crops.

"Dairy farmers have been growing rye because of the 'winter window,'" said Weber. "Rather than letting their soil bare and not getting anything off of it, it's one way to be more efficient in terms

Leon Weber takes samples — three observations of the same treatment in a randomized pattern — of the rye grown in the manure-treated and non-manure areas. Tests will determine how much of the nitrogen from the manure was taken up by the plants.

Banquet Brings Egg Producers Together

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — The Pennsylvania Egg Marketing Association (PEMA) held a dinner meeting last week in light of the ongoing controversy drawn by the recent spread of salmonella enteritidis (SE) in local egg flocks.

About 60 egg producers and marketers attended the event. Guest speakers included Boyd Wolff, state secretary of agriculture, and J.C. "Mac" McLaurin, general manager of Northeast United Egg Producers (NEUEP).

Wolff has met recently with state health officials from Pennsylvania and New York to develop support for legislation to increase testing for SE in eggs and to help promote more understanding of how to regulate the widespread problems of SE in the layer industry.

Wolff emphasized the growing importance of recognizing the presence of SE in the environment and working to rid it from layer flocks.

Wolff made a plea for the PEMA, NEUEP, as well as egg producers to support a uniform SE testing program. Legislation may soon be passed to include mandatory egg refrigeration because the FDA still considers the egg to be a non-perishable product.

McLaurin spoke about the need for commication between producers and marketers. The NEUEP serves three existing functions, according to McLaurin: to serve existing members, to obtain new members, and to preserve the image of the egg marketing industry.

Prices were unchanged. Trade sentiment was steady to fully steady. Demand was about moderate to good. Retail promotional activity on large and extra large at mostly 69 and 79 cents respectively created some additional consumer buying interest. Distributive movement was also good as resort areas were opening up for the season. Supplies were usually adequate and additional offerings were confidently held.

Trucklot buying interest was light and cautious on all but wings which were in tight supply. Supplies of skinned boneless breasts were fully adequate to occasionally ample and buyers generally showed little interest in extra product. Whole breasts were adequate to ample for immediate at lower trending prices, but not as easy to book for later arrivals. Legs, thighs and drums were about adequate to adequate, while leg quarters were generally fully adequate.

National Egg Market

Wednesday, May 23, 1990

NATIONAL EGG MARKET - AT A GLANCE: The market tone continued fully steady to firm in most regions. Distributive movement was generally fair to good as increased promotional activity and a seasonal pick up in business stimulated additional buying. Supplies were usually in fair balance with current needs while additional product was held in firm hands. Breakers were cautious and with several working reduced holiday schedules next week limited their purchases of raw materials.

ATTENTION TOBACCO GROWERS

Golden Leaf Tobacco Company Would Like To Encourage You To Increase 609 Tobacco Production In 1990.

We have increased our orders for your tobacco over the past several years and could have purchased 1 million pounds more had it been available in 1989. Surplus government stock has been depleted and US grown tobacco inventory is at its lowest level in years.

Our goal has been to establish a strong market for Pennsylvania 609 by personally visiting manufacturers overseas and here in the US. Our goal has been met!

The outlook is good for 1990 as more US grown tobacco is needed for cigarette production both in the US and overseas.

It is our desire to continue to work closely with each of you. We are daily continuing our efforts to build the 609 tobacco demand into a lasting market that will carry into the future. Our company prides itself on a relationship with the farmers based on honesty, integrity and loyalty. If we can be of service to you please feel free to call.

THE OLD FARMER'S ALMANAC

MAY 28-JUNE 3, 1990

N.H. turtles lay their eggs.

May 28, 1934, the Dionne quintuplets are born in a farmhouse in Ontario May 30, 1868, the first Memorial Day is observed . June 2, 1851, Maine becomes the first state to pass a prohibition law . June 2, 1924, Congress grants citizenship to all American Indians Circumstances alter cases, the straightest stick appears crooked in water

Ask the Old Farmer: We have a pan of water on our woodstove in the basement. Is there anything we can put in the water to improve the smell in the basement? FW, Conn

Try adding a tablespoon of vinegar to the water in the pan. If it's the wood smoke that bothers you, open the dampers in the stove for a minute before opening the door to add wood.

Home Hints: Plant horseradish near potatoes to guard against potato beetles

OLD FARMER'S WEATHER FORECAST

New England: This week starts on last week's note, warm and sunny; no need for a coat Grab your umbrella as rain appears Warm summer showers turn cool

Greater New York-New Jersey: Showers, drizzle, wet and dismal Flowers like it, ducks do too, but it makes people kinda blue

Middle Atlantic Coastal: Heavy rain begins the week, with seasonable temperatures Then hot, with showers off and on, here and there, increasing to rain

Piedmont & Southeast Coastal: May ends with rain, then milder Rain diminishes to showers to greet the month of June, but they'll end soon

OPINION

Country-Wide Milk Market

Transportation of milk from one federal order to another, even across the country from Wisconson to Pennsylvania or Maryland will be easier and less expensive if this new product is produced commercially. A new USDA researched frozen milk concentrate combines reconstituted milk with the texture of whole milk but with the low cholesterol content of skim milk. And the frozen milk tastes great.

Even if cholesterol isn't a concern, consider the convenience of reaching into your freezer to make up a quart of milk when your cake mix falls a cup shy. And although the concentrate must be kept frozen in storage, it occupies only about one fourth the storage area and has only about one-fourth the weight of fluid milk, and could be shipped from the mid-west for about 12.5 cents per gallon.

The milk concentrate is the brain-child of George Bookwalter and Steven Lyle of the Agricultural Research Service. They got the idea while working on a formulation to provide fluid milk for victims of the Chernobyl nuclear accident.

An 8-ounce serving of reconstituted milk from concentrate contains just 4 milligrams of cholesterol compared with 33 milligrams found in whole milk. Skim milk and the new milk beverage have the same cholesterol level.

Composition of the frozen milk is variable. Current formulations are adjusted so the reconstituted milk product contains a minimum of 8.25 percent milk solids and up to 2 percent vegetable oil.

Past attempts at a frozen concentrate resulted in difficulties in reconstituting the butterfat of milk. But by conbining nonfat dry milk with a critical level of water, then blending cholesterol-free oil, such as soybean, corn, or peanut oil, overcomes the need for emulsifiers and homogenizers.

Several companies are interested in commercializing the frozen milk technology now patented by ARS. And with this new product the milk marketing area from dairy farmers in any given location becomes the whole country.

Who knows? In the not too distant future, for milk promotion check-off dollars to follow the milk to market, the Pennsylvania milk promotion groups may need to advertise in San Fransisco.

To Be Alert For Corn Pests

We are into excellent corn growing weather and we are also into the season for cutworm damage and this includes the black cutworm. Just a reminder to keep a close check on all corn fields for the next few weeks. Damage symptoms will be plants cut off just above the ground level. The culprit will be hiding in the soil a few inches from the cut plant. We suggest a rescue treatment if 2-3% of the plants are cut and you can find more than 5 larvae in 100 plants. Remember the black cutworm is the one with the granular skin. The control materials listed in the 1989-90 Agronomy Guide include Sevin, or Lorsban, or Pydrin, or Ambush, or Penncap, or Dylox. Be sure to follow all label directions.

To Be Aware Of Fly Build-Up

There is considerable increase in fly population in many of our operations this spring. Keep in mind that one of the best ways to prevent fly problems is to eliminate fly breeding opportunities. Flies are almost impossible to control with the use of chemicals only. However, chemicals are helpful if combined with other management practices. To help prevent flies from breeding, clean-up accumulations of manure and spilled feed along feed bunks and a the edge of feed lots. Design lots and alleys so they can be scraped thoroughly and frequently. When manure is hauled to the field, incorporate it before flies have a chance to hatch.

Your fly control program should integrate several different control techniques and insecticides, if you are going to be successful. Flies will become resistant to a particular insecticide if exposed to the same material several times in succession. For best results, use a wide variety of insecticide formulations (space sprays, mist sprays, baits, residual sprays, etc.) and different classes of insecticides.

Always follow label directions when using any pesticide.

To Practice Bio-Security

Livestock and poultry diseases continue to be a threat to farmers. I still feel that in too many cases the farmer brings the infection home to his own animals and poultry. Are you careful about the footwear worn when attending the public stockyards or sales barns? Most of these places are an outlet for animals with some infection; the chances of picking up these organisms on your boots or shoes are great. Even though the public places are often disinfected, there still is a danger of infection.

We urge farmers to be very careful with their sanitary habits. The same is true when using public trucks to transport animals; be sure they are clean and well disinfected. Don't be guilty of bringing home infection to your own animals.

To Clip Pastures

Mowing permanent pastures at this time of year is a very good idea. Many of the plants will be heading out and some will go to seed; this means that the plants should be mowed. This practice will help control weeds and encourage new growth of grass.

Livestock will consume the dry clippings. Pastures should be clipped several times during the season. In addition, the clipped area will look much better to the general public as they travel through the county.

THE BIBLE SPEAKS
BY LAWRENCE W. ALTHOUSE

WHAT DO THEY SAY ABOUT YOU?

May 27, 1990

Background Scripture: 2 John; 3 John.
Devotional Reading: Luke 18:18-30.

The Third Letter of John is interesting because it is written to an individual instead of a church. We don't know much about him, except that his name is Gaius and he is obviously highly respected. If I had been Gaius, I would have held on to this letter for a long time. It is a wonderful tribute to Gaius and it must have been very gratifying for him to receive it.

The writer of this letter says, "For I greatly rejoiced when some of the brethren arrived and testified to the truth of your life, as indeed you do follow the truth. No greater joy can I have than this, to hear that my children follow the truth" (vs. 3,4). Truth is one of the writer's greatest and most persistent concerns. In his first letter he wrote: "Little children, let us not love in word or speech but in deed and truth" (1 John 3:18). In his second letter, he wrote to the church: "I rejoiced greatly to find some of your children following the truth, just as we have been commanded by the father" (2 John:4). And now, in his third letter, he rejoices in finding that Gaius enjoys a reputation for "following the truth."

A LOYAL THING

We need to remember, however, that the writer of these epistles never thinks of "truth" in the abstract. For him to follow the truth means to "follow love" (2 John 6). Gaius is commended because he lives the truth of the gospel in a way that is obvious to others. "Beloved, it is a loyal thing you do when you render any service to the brethren, especially to strangers, who have testified to your love before the church" (3 John 5). Gaius is loyal to what the writer of the epistle has taught him.

I'm not sure we make enough of this in the churches today. When I think of those whom we honor, it occurs to me that we usually commend most highly those who spend much of their time and talents working on church boards, committees and agencies. I'm not suggesting for a minute that we should not honor these contributions, but simply question whether we shouldn't recognize even more those who, like Gaius, are outstanding in their "serivce to the brethren, especially to strangers..."

ESPECIALLY STRANGERS

In one of my previous congregations there was a man who held many offices in the church and was certainly reckoned as one of our top congregational leaders. Above that, he was a man of loyalty, one upon whom you could always count, regardless of how small or menial the task might be. But even more than that, he was a man who rendered service to others, including and especially strangers. I remember and honor him for these, much more than for the offices he held.

Nineteen hundred years after he lived and died, Gaius is still remembered and honored for his loyalty in rendering "service to the brethren, especially to strangers." That's what they said about him. Is there any higher honor than that?

And what do they say about you?

tered or grade animals, is invited to join the Brubakers and others 7 p.m., June 21, for a day of "food, fun, and fellowship."

Planned is a variety band, full course meal, numerous family oriented contests and time to talk.

The promise of having a good time is often reason enough for attending such a function. However, in this case, reasons for attending run much deeper.

It is needed in order to adapt to a drastically changing community, organizers said.

The Brubakers said they feel that farmers, especially in areas pressured with commuter-residential and shopping center

(Turn to Page A23)

What To Bring, Directions

Registration for attending the 7 p.m., June 21, Holstein Association's family day picnic is simple, according to Lowell Brubaker, chairman of the event's committee.

The only cost involved is for the catered full-course, hot roast beef meal, Brubaker said. Children under five-years-old eat free, those under 12 eat for $4.50 and the cost is $9 for adults.

The rest of the evening carries no cost, but to help with food preparation and other planning, registration must be made by June 16.

The event is not limited to members of the Holstein Association, but is open to any and all Holstein breeders of registered and grade animals. The intent of the day is to share a family-oriented evening.

Bring A Lawn Chair

Other than themselves and a mind to have a good time, the only other thing asked of those planning to attend the event is to bring some lawn chairs and possibly some blankets to sit upon, according to Brubaker.

Registration

Registration can be made by filling out the form below and mailing it to Brubaker. Other registration forms should be available through the county extension office or through members of the association.

Out Of The Way, Easy To Find

The location of the John Brubaker farm, site of the family picnic, is best described as "You can get there from here, but some ways are better than others," according to Lowell Brubaker.

The farm's address is 612 Noble Road, in Sadsbury Township. It's close to the Chester County line. The easiest path of travel is from 896 South (Georgetown Road), travel east on Noble Road about three miles. The farm is on the right side of the road and a sign hangs from a post at the end of the lane.

1990 FAMILY DAY REGISTRATION

The _____ family from _____ plans to attend the family day event.

We have ___ members in our family and can be expected for dinner. I would like to reserve ___ adult meals, ___ children meals and ___ free meals for children under 5-years-old.

Mail registration form and payment for meals to: Lowell Brubaker, 2889 Zink Road, Manheim, PA, 17545. For more information, call (717) 653-2612.

As host of a Lancaster Holstein Association family picnic, the Brubaker family of Sadsbury Township, say they'd like all breeders of Holsteins, grade and registered, association members or not, to come join them in the June 21 event. From left is Barbara with daughter Jill, the farm's favorite cow Kelly, and John with son John Michael. Not shown are son Eric and daughter Andrea.

Family Picnic, Activities

growth, are being diluted and lost among a mass of people who know little to nothing of farming.

John Brubaker said that these are communities where, historically, many special events and day-to-day functions were planned around the farming schedule.

Now, these traditional, rural communities are becoming more and more populated by families whose income is generated from jobs located up to 60 miles away or more in high population centers like Philadelphia.

These new neighbors, for the most part, do not understand the ways of farming. And in many cases the new neighbors outnumber the historic residents.

There is a problem, apparent to the Brubakers and others, that results from the diminishing number of farmers and the increasing number of non-farmers — farmers are starting to lose touch with each other.

In a symbolic sense, Brubaker said it feels like being a member of a circle of men who stand linked, hand-clasped-to-hand, surrounding and protecting a growing group of people. As the group of people inside grows, those on the outside find it difficult, and in some cases impossible to keep fingers touching.

In such a scenario, once the link is broken, it's easy to not believe that there is someone else there, just out of easy reach.

Also, it is accepted that it is a basic need of all men to feel a kinship and acceptance among others. Brubaker said such a thing can be a powerful bonding force, when people find similarities in each other's interests and experiences.

According to Lowell Brubaker (no relation to John Brubaker), chairman of the committee, today's Lancaster-based farm families, especially those not affiliated with the Plain communities, are becoming rapidly absorbed into the surrounding non-farm community; not only physically, but mentally as well.

In fact, both Lowell and John said they can possibly see their generation being the last to stay in farming: not only are there financially improbable barriers, but many children growing up on a farm aren't getting the social reinforcement necessary to maintain the interest.

Taking time, at least once a year, to get together, affirm and reaffirm friendships and acquaintances and to provide an opportunity for full family inter-action can go a long way to help the Lancaster farm community remain cohesive, the two men explained.

They said the evening of making contact helps provide a sense of inner-strength and security that farmers are not alone in facing whatever the always unpredictable future of agriculture brings.

Sensing the importance of such an event, a number of agri-businesses have made cash and other donations to help make the family day possible.

According to John Brubaker, to date, cash donations have been made by Agri Inc., Hoober's Feed, Gap Veterinarian Associates, Hamilton Bank. Atlantic Dairy Co-op is providing milk beverages and Maplehofe Dairy is providing ice cream.

Specifically planned for the evening is a dairy judging contest for various age groups with prizes being a forged plate bearing a farm scene, that has been very popular recently, Lowell said. Judging will be Donald Hostetter of Maple Bound Farm, Parkesburg.

Following is a full-course, hot roast beef meal, catered by Jan Skiles of Narvon.

Activities for adults include a milk chugging contest, bale-throwing contest, wash-hanging relays and other light competitions.

Entertainment is to be provided by Fine Line, a Lancaster-based variety band.

For the children, a pinata, a clown, balloons and a rabbit chase are planned. In the rabbit chase, two different age groups are to be divided and the winner gets to keep the rabbit.

Those interested in taking a closer look at the Brubaker's dairy operation should note his rolling herd average is about, if not more than, 20,000 pounds milk, 671 protein and 780 butterfat.

The couple bought the farm 14 years ago and are a third generation family farm. They started with a primarily grade operation and over about five years switched to a registered herd which they've maintained for the last three years.

Recently, John designed and built a heifer building that he said he would be glad to show.

Those wishing to donate to help offset the cost of the event should call Lowell Brubaker at (717) 653-2612.

Pennsylvania All-American Streamlined

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The East Coast's most prestigious dairy show is getting even better. The 1990 Pennsylvania All-American Dairy Show here September 24-27 will be one day shorter and have two more national breed shows than last year, show president Obie Snider announced.

The Imler, PA dairyman noted that the new four-day show opens on Monday as usual but will close this year on Thursday.

"This is a first for the 27-year-old All-American but one welcomed by show-weary exhibitors," Snider said. In 1989, some 2400 sleek dairy cattle were entered in the All-American by breeders in 25 states and Canada. Snider felt the streamlined 1990 show could attract even more.

Also "a first time ever," the All-American president added, is the line up of six national breed shows. There were four in 1989.

Snider said Brown Swiss and Milking Shorthorn breeders will parade their top cows in Eastern National shows on Tuesday, September 25; the National Guernsey Show and Eastern National Ayrshire Show follow on Wednesday, September 26 and the Middle Atlantic Regional Jersey Show and Eastern National Holstein Show wind up activities on Thursday, September 27.

"The new four-day All-American required several schedule changes," Snider explained.

The Eastern National Holstein Show had previously carried over into Friday. This year it will be a one day show.

The Supreme Champion finale has been shifted from Friday to late Thursday.

Both the Holstein sale and Herdsman's Buffet have been moved from Thursday to Wednesday night.

Four junior shows and contests retain their usual time slots on Monday and Tuesday, Snider announced. Other sale schedules will remain the same as past years.

Pennsylvania All-American Dairy Show is sponsored by the Pennsylvania Dairy and Allied Industries Association in cooperation with the Pennsylvania Farm Show Commission and Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture.

DHIA Has A Few Questions For You

Pennsylvania DHIA wants to make new optional reports available that will be useful to help make dairy farming more profitable. We have already started to survey what services other state DHIA's provide for their members. But what we really need to know is what you need as a farmer in Pennsylvania. So, we are asking you to help us.

We would like you to answer two basic questions for us:

A. What present reports are most useful to you?

B. What new DHIA reports could you use?

To help us help you, please take a few minutes to answer the following questions and send us your answers as soon as possible. The address of the Pennsylvania DHIA office is listed at the bottom of this questionnaire.

PRESENT REPORTS

* Which of the present basic DHIA reports do you find most useful? Please list them numbers 1 through 5 in order of importance. Leave blank any report that you do not use.

Tobacco Grower Alert

JOHN O. YOCUM
Sr. Research Assoc., Agronomy Dept.
Penn State

By now I am sure you are aware the use of maneb type fungicides have been voluntarily cancelled by the manufacturers on certain crops. Tobacco is one of the crops that no longer has label clearance for the use of Dithane and Manzate products. Existing farmer stocks can be used on tobacco, but you will not be able to buy materials that have clearance for tobacco. For most growers, this means Ridomil is the only labeled material to control blue mold in tobacco. Ridomil is cleared for use as a preplant treatment (2 quarts per acre) and as a lay-by treatment (1 quart per acre) if at least 1 quart was applied preplant. It is not cleared for application to the tobacco plant after the last cultivation. Since we now have no labeled materials to control blue mold later in the season, we recommend all growers use Ridomil. Although Ridomil is expensive, blue mold disease can quckly cause losses that will greatly exceed the cost of Ridomil.

of maximing those windows when a farmer can produce a crop."

Research on the "biomass," or amount of living matter generated by plant test plots, has been undertaken on the dairy and poultry farm of Paul Clugston in Halifax, a town north of Harrisburg. By knowing the total biomass produced on specific plots, technicians can pinpoint how many pounds of nitrogen are being taken up by the rye.

Effects of manure

Plots of land measuring 20 feet by 1,000 feet, totalling approximately 7.6 acres, were used to test the effects of nitrogen from manure on rye. The rye was seeded in mid-November last year. One plot had no rye, but was broadcast with manure. In another plot, manure was spread in one rye strip; still another rye strip received no manure. The rye growing in the manure plot grew higher with more density than the one without manure.

'Not all the good ideas that farmers are incorporating come from universities or private research places, but it's the farmers themselves, creative people, who have come up with a number of creative management techniques that work.'

"You can see the difference where the manure was applied and where it wasn't," said Clugston, who farms 219 acres of land. His operation includes 101 cows and 95 heifers and calves. In addition, Clugston raises 134,000 broilers per cycle, under contract to Pennfield Corporation.

Multiple observations — three replications of the same treatment in a randomized pattern — of the rye grown in the manure-treated and non-manure areas will determine how much of the nitrogen from the manure was taken up by the plants.

Corn will be planted under the same conditions to determine the effects of the previous rye cover crop on the growth of the corn.

Other objectives

Other test objectives, according to the researchers, are to determine the leaching of nitrogen; the effects of planting a sorghum and Sudan grass hybrid forage crop on absorbing excess nitrogen; and how the rotational cycle affects nitrogen in the soil.

"Sometimes things look good on paper, but what's important is to see how things actually work out on the farm, and how it works in with the cycle of cropping systems, and what are the labor, machinery, and weather constraints farmers are facing," Weber said.

He said that farmers grow the rye to produce forage for dairy. "He has to balance two things — he wants to get maximum rye production, which requires some nutrients." At the same time, after corn is planted, the farmer wants to "minimize the amount of nutrients that are going to get in the groundwater system compared to what gets into the crop," he said.

Some farmers spread the manure or place liquid nitrogen down when they plant. Unfortunately, if a heavy rain follows, much of the nitrogen is washed away or leached into the groundwater. "But if the rye is planted early, this does not seem to be a serious problem," said Lanyon.

Reduce leaching

"So you can reduce the risk of leaching if you just put a small amount of nitrogen there to get it started and then come in a little later and sidedress — making nitrogen available to the plant when it's going to be taking up the greatest amount," he said.

According to Weber, by combining the nitrogen application with the cultivation, farmers can reduce the risk of runoff or leaching from heavy rains.

"Farmers," he said, "can pile on the nutrients and get back lots of production. But there can be some off-farm consequences, in terms of what's really happening to the environment. So what we have to do is balance what we're doing with our nutrients in terms of being able to get the production that the farmer needs and, at the same time, to minimize the effects off the farm."

"You can see the difference where the manure was applied and where it wasn't," said Paul Clugston, who farms 219 acres of land in Halifax, Pennsylvania. In the left, manure was spread for the rye cover crop; on the right, where the stalks are smaller, no manure was spread.

Rodale Institute and Penn State are working with the farmer to "put some of these things out on the field and see what works and what doesn't," said Weber. "What are the limitations, what are the constraints that farmers face in trying some different management techniques?"

'(The farmer) has to balance two things — he wants to get maximum rye production, which requires some nutrients. At the same time, he wants to minimize the amount of nutrients that are going to get in the groundwater system compared to what gets into the crop.'

Plant earlier

"Rye can be planted later than other winter cereals," said Lanyon. "But early planting will contribute to earlier harvest and better nitrogen uptake in the fall."

Because the rye can be planted earlier, it can be harvested earlier, which gains time to plant corn and speeds the demand for labor. The time is crucial, because weeks — and money — can be lost. In Clugston's case, the sorghum and Sudan grass hybrid forage crop can be harvested before corn silage harvest, which allows him to plant rye earlier.

"Plus," said Lanyon, "the sorghum and Sudan grass hybrid can be planted after the ideal times for corn plnating with little yield loss. This flexibility spreads the spring work load."

Paul Clugston harvests the rye crop on his farm in Halifax, Pennsylvania. The rye is used for forage for his dairy operation.

"I put a lot of effort out working with Penn State," said Clugston. "I don't get paid for any of this. But the information that I can collect from this and try to use it is hopefully where the benefit is."

"I think everybody's becoming aware that there are some problems in terms of what's happening with our groundwater," Weber said. "And there are a lot of farmers who are very conscious of it and very conscious about land stewardship. Not all the good ideas that farmers are incorporating come from universities or private research places, but it's the farmers themselves, creative people, who have come up with a number of creative management techniques that work."

Leon Weber, on-farm specialist with the Rodale Institute, points to a field that was sampled. Plots of land measuring 20 feet by 1,000 feet, totalling approximately 7.6 acres, were used to test the effects of nitrogen from manure on rye. The rye was seeded in mid-November last year on the Clugston farm test plots.

Deworm Cattle, Spray For Tree Worms

Edward J. Woods
Extension Agent

Consider Deworming Cattle

Internal parasites can cause costly problems, according to Glenn Shirk, Extension Dairy Agent. Infected cattle have poorer feed conversions, grow more slowly, have a poorer immune systems and don't produce or conceive well.

Young cattle under 20 months of age and poorly fed cattle are most susceptible. Resistance to internal parasites increases with age, but older cattle can also become infected.

A major source of infective larvae is pastures, especially those that are overstocked or overgrazed. Another source is feed that is contaminated by the feces of infected cattle. Thus, young cattle should not be grazed on land grazed by older cattle.

A good time to deworm cattle is a few weeks after they have been turned out to pasture, with a second deworming about 3-6 weeks later. Young calves should be dewormed about every three months.

For Haylage And Hay Making

Good quality forages can help farmers generate more cash income with little to no additional expenses. And, what farmer couldn't use that right now!

Cows produce more milk and livestock gain more rapidly on higher quality forages. The need for purchased concentrates is also generally reduced. So, if you are growing forages, concentrate on improving nutrient yield per acres.

Most important to quality is stage of maturity at time of harvest. For established stand of alfalfa, harvest the first cutting at the late bud stage; later cuttings can be harvested in the late bud to early bloom stage - about 35 to 42 days after the previous cutting. To enhance the vigor and longevity of the stand, at least one of the cuttings should be allowed to bloom. Similarly, the first cutting of a new seeding of alfalfa should be made in the early bloom stage.

Worms Eating Pine Trees

Grasses should be cut in the boot stage of maturity, just as the heads are beginning to emerge.

"The worms are eating all my pine trees". This is a question we have answered many times the past two weeks.

The insect is about one inch long, black or dark green in color and is known as the European Pine Sowfly. Their eggs were layed on pine needles last September and October and are just now hatching. They can consume large amounts of foliage very quickly.

I suggest you spray with Sevin to control the worms. Follow the directions on the container.

Dog Ticks

Dog ticks seem to be quite prevalent at this time of the year. These ticks are picked up by your dogs in the woods and high grass.

If the source of ticks is from a wooded area around your home, it would be advisable to treat this area.

Spray bushes in area of about 20-30 feet on either side paths with Sevin, or Diazinon or Drusban.

Pennsylvania Fairs Brochure Available

EMLENTON (Clarion Co.) — The Pennsylvania State Association of County Fairs (PSACF) has announced that a listing of all the agricultural fairs within the state is now available in a color brochure.

Each fair is listed by county, the fair name, the location, a contact person, and the date for the 1990 event. For easier reference, the state is divided into four regions.

County fairs, the showplace of Pennsylvania Agriculture, attract millions during their June through October season. Nearly every county in Pennsylvania has at least one agricultural fair, and many have more than one. A total of 112 events are held yearly.

Agri-business and agriculture is Pennsylvania's number one industry. Farming and related agribusiness employ 1.2 million Pennsylvanians each year, and contribute approximately $30 billion in economic activity in Pennsylvania. The agricultural fairs are the showplace of this monumental industry.

For a free copy of this brochure entitled "Have We Got A Fair For You", write to Beverly Snyder, secretary, PSACF, Box 147, Emlenton, PA 16373.

Banquet Brings Egg Producers Together

"Communication is a major part of our membership services," said McLaurin. "For example, on the topic of Salmonella enteritidis, we tell our members what the federal government wants us to do to prevent and detect the bacteria. We tell the public and members of Congress what we are doing to prevent outbreaks. We are staying abreast of the latest research on SE. And we pass on to members lessons learned from previous outbreaks."

The NEUEP is a regional agricultural cooperative association dedicated to the growth of the egg industry through ethical and sound business practices. The association represents nearly a third of the producers in the region.

"Serving our members is my number one priority," said McLaurin. The other priorities — getting new members and preserving their image — will naturally follow if membership services are performed correctly, according to McLaurin. "It's a matter of making membership meaningful," he said. A new Associates Program has also been added, in which firms from allied industries can become more closely affiliated with the producers.

J.C. "Mac" McLaurin, general manager of Northeast United Egg Producers, spoke to members of PEMA at a dinner meeting last week in Lancaster.

Boyd Wolff, state secretary of agriculture, right, was honored with a special appreciation award by Bob Trout, president of the Pennsylvania Egg Marketing Association, at a dinner meeting last week.

Grain, Soybean Marketing Guide Available

NEWARK, Del. — University of Delaware cooperative extension is offering a guide for using basis in grain marketing decisions.

In agricultural economics, basis is the difference between the cash price and the futures price at the time and place of delivery. Grain producers use basis to determine the most profitable times to sell grain and soybean yields.

The marketing guide, Extension Bulletin #150, was prepared by extension marketing crops specialist Carl L. German, agricultural marketing professor Dr. Ulrich C. Toensmeyer, and research assistant Hudson Keller.

The publication identifies and describes several ways farmers can use basis to their best advantage. Since historical basis data is needed to adjust current conditions, historical basis records for Eastern Shore corn and soybeans are also included.

Copies of this guide are available free of charge and can be ordered from Carl L. German, extension specialist, Cross Marketing, 230 Townsend Hall, Newark, DE 19717-1303.

Olympic Contender Races For Milk In Canoe

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — Hard work and dedication are just two of the values Olympic contender Ben Goodrich said he learned on the family farm.

Recently, Goodrich said he believes gaining these values from his parents, Ben and Cindy Goodrich of Owego, N.Y., has helped him excede in flatwater kayaking competitions.

The competition Goodrich will be participating in is the 28th Annual General Clinton Canoe Regatta, which started yesterday and ends Monday in Bainbridge.

The spirit of excellence Goodrich carries comes from his philosophy that "any goal you set for yourself you can obtain."

He has set high goals for himself of not just being in the 1992 Olympics, but bringing home a metal. As his Olympic kayak coach Lee Abbott explained, when she first saw Goodrich race, "I just felt Ben had a strong desire to do well."

At the General Clinton Canoe Regatta, Goodrich will be participating in the 70 Mile Endurance Race which begins in Cooperstown, and finishes in Bainbridge at the General Clinton Park. This regatta attracts the best professional and amateur canoeists in the world. Local dairy farmers and the American Dairy Association and Dairy Council Inc. are sponsoring the 1990 Regatta.

A senior at Cobleskill Ag and Tech, Goodrich spends part of the school year on the New York campus and part in Florida where he trains under the guidance of Olympic coaches. He has already won gold and silver metals at the Empire State Games in Syracuse and a bronze metal at the Pan Am Games in Canada.

Competing in the Olympics is Ben Goodrich's goal for 1992, but beyond that he has other aspirations as well. One of which is to return to his family's farm. The Goodrich's farm has a proud history, it has been in the family since 1802. Today they milk 60 Holsteins and have 320 acres.

LISA-Funded Study Compares Conventional, Alternative Ag

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Despite much-ballyhooed claims about the economic and environmental "advantages" of low-input sustainable agriculture, research funded by USDA's LISA program shows conventional agriculture, using commercial fertilizer, to be more profitable for farmers than alternative production systems. Both the conventional and alternative systems showed the same environmental impact.

Research conducted in South Dakota compared the economic results over a five-year period, 1984-89, of a conventional and an alternative agriculture farm. The results showed the conventional farm averaged $41,720 in annual income while the alternative farm averaged $28,700 in income annually.

The net income per acre for all costs except management were $60 per acre for the conventional farm and $41 per acre for the alternative farm. Even when researchers assumed a 25 percent premium price for the alternative farm production, per acre income rose to only $48.

"Where's the press release?" asked TFI President Gary D. Myers. "The LISA program operated by the Cooperative State Research Service spends plenty of money to tell the public about the so-called virtues of alternative agriculture. When they spend tax dollars to fund research that counteracts their bias, they should be just as eager to publicize those results."

"There is a lesson here for Congress, too," Myers continued. "While they are struggling in the farm bill to maintain farm income, at the same time they are proposing we pour millions of dollars annually into research and training to get more farmers to use alternative production methods. If the goal is to increase farm income, why use tax dollars to induce farmers to use methods that are proven less profitable?"

Myers pointed out the study also disproved the theory that alternative methods are more environmentally benign. Soil tests conducted on both farms showed equal amounts of soil nitrate.

"The results demonstrate that a nitrate is a nitrate," he said. "The good news is that nitrogen from commercial fertilizer can be managed better than nitrogen from other sources, so it is actually more environmentally benign."

Animal Health Commission Seeks Information

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The Pennsylvania Animal Health Commission met recently to hear about diagnostic services and facilities in Maryland, New York, and Missouri.

Commission members heard from Dr. John Shook, retired state veterinarian for Maryland; Dr. Donald Lein, director of the New York State Diagnostic Laboratory at Cornell University; and Dr. Larry Morehouse, retired animal health consultant from the University of Missouri.

Agriculture Secretary Boyd E. Wolff, who chairs the commission, said the purpose of the meeting was to learn how other states protect animal health and the agriculture industry.

"The Animal Health Commission can't afford to overlook an idea or technique that could protect Pennsylvania's leading industry," said Wolff.

"It would be foolish to presume we have all the answers to animal health. With so much at stake, we should be looking for ways to improve diagnostic services for our farmers."

Pennsylvania's Animal Health Commission was created in December of 1988, and began meeting on July 27, 1989. The commission is charged with developing policy on all animal health, research, diagnostic, and indemnity programs in the commonwealth. It also advises the Department of Agriculture concerning research funding related to animal health.

Three veterinarians and six farmers serve on the commission along with the secretaries of agriculture and health and four members of the General Assembly.

FARM MANAGEMENT

AGRICULTURAL SECURITY AREA PROGRAM

Russell Powell
Extension Agent
Business Management

(Second in a series on farmland preservation.)

Although agriculture is the number one industry in Pennsylvania, many farmers, legislators, and other citizens are concerned about the future of agriculture in Pennsylvania.

The main concerns are the rapid loss of farmland through development, and whether farming will remain a viable enterprise in the future.

The Agricultural Security Area Law of 1981, commonly referred to as Act 43, was the first step toward preservation of Pennsylvania farmland. This Act and its amendments allows local governments to create areas where farming is the preferred activity.

The Ag Security Areas serve as a tool for strengthening and protecting agriculture by allowing farmers to establish areas where agriculture is the primary and protected activity.

The following describes the Ag Security Area Program as amended in 1988.

Key features

Agricultural Security Areas are:

- Voluntary.
- Township or borough level programs.
- Initiated by petition of farm landowners.
- A minimum area of 500 total acres (may include non-adjacent farmland parcels).
- Not a land-use law.
- Use of land is not restricted.
- Not irrevocable.
- Seven-year lifetime, then reviewed.
- Flexible.
- Parcels may be added during the seven-year period.

Participants receive special consideration regarding:

- Local ordinance effect on farming activities and nuisances.
- State agency rules and regulations.
- Review of farmland condemnation by state and local government agencies.
- Review of state-funded development projects.
- Eligibiliy to sell agricultural conservation easements (may be profitable).

Creating Agricultural Security Areas

Setting up an Agricultural Security Area is a simple process with five basic steps.

1. The process of establishing an Agricultural Security Area is initiated by petition of owners of productive farmland totalling at least 500 acres. The land to be included must have soils conducive to agriculture and used for the production of crops, livestock and livestock products.

The petition is submitted to the local government unit with a description and boundaries of the proposed Area. Non-adjacent parcels of at least 10 acres may be included.

2. The governing body gives public notice of the proposal. Basic information is printed in a newspaper and posted in five locations, with an invitation for objections and modifications to be submitted within 15 days.

3. After the 15-day period, the proposal, along with objections and modifications, is referred to the local planning commission and a specially formed Agricultural Security Area Advisory Committee made up of three active farmers, one citizen, and a member of the local governing body. Both groups have up to 45 days to review the proposal and make recommendations to the governing body.

4. A public hearing on the proposed Area must be held by the governing body, and modifications may be made up to seven days before the public hearing is advertised.

5. Following the public hearing, the governing body may decide to adopt or reject the proposal or any of the modifications to it. The governing body must act within 180 days from the date the petition was submitted or the Agricultural Security Area is automatically adopted as originally petitioned.

Benefits of Agricultural Security Areas

Participation in an Agricultural Security Area entitles landowners to special considerations from local government, such as the prohibition of ordinances that unreasonably restrict farm structures or practices, or "nuisance ordinances" that deem normal farming operations or practices to be nuisances. State government agencies must modify their administrative regulations and procedures to encourage viable farming in Agricultural Security Areas.

Land condemnations within Agricultural Security Areas by commonwealth or local agencies (such as municipal authorities or school boards) must be reviewed and approved before being finalized. In addition, all state-funded development projects that might affect an established area must be reviewed and modifications made to ensure the integrity of the Agricultural Security Area.

Landowners who wish to apply to sell their conservation easements must first enroll the land in an Ag Security Area. The mechanics of selling conservation easements will be discussed next week.

For more information about farmland preservation, contact your county extension office.

ELCO Wins Lebanon Envirothon

CORNWALL (Lebanon Co.) — A team consisting of Mark Boyer, Adam Sitler, Matt Johnson, Chris Arnold, and Wendy Zeller representing ELCO High School won the seventh annual Envirothon sponsored by the Lebanon County Conservation district. The team was coached by Lynn Aponick.

The Envirothon is a competition which challenges high school youth's knowledge in the areas of wildlife, forestry, soils, aquatics, and a current environmental issue. In 1990 the current evnironmental issue was wetlands.

ELCO amassed 200 points out of a possible 246. They were followed by Grace Christian at 198.5, Northern Lebanon 195.5, Palmyra 187.5, Cedar Crest 166, and Lebanon Catholic 123.

ELCO wins the right to square off against the champions from each of the Commonwealth's other participating counties at the state contest to be held June 22-23 at Bald Eagle State Park. The winner of the state Envirothon goes to the national finals in Zanesville, Ohio in August.

ELCO team members were awarded T-shirts, a traveling plaque, Peterson's Field guide to Eastern Birds donated by the Quitapahilla Audubon Society, and a $50 expense check for the state competition.

All participating schools received a field guide for their libraries and each participant received a certificate.

Jack Hubley, of WGAL-TV's "Call Of The Outdoors" gave a guest presentation on raptors, using a live red-tailed hawk.

Dairylea Urges Opposition To Wetlands Proposal

SYRACUSE, NY — Dairylea Cooperative Inc. has begun lobbying efforts opposing wetlands regulations that have been proposed by the Pennsylvania Department of Environmental Resources (DER).

Pennsylvania members of Dairylea's Legislative Committee have initiated a grass roots letter-writing campaign encouraging their state legislators to consider and accommodate the needs of farmers in finalizing a state wetlands policy.

The proposed DER regulations, as viewed by Dairylea members, unfairly disadvantage farmers who have wetlands on their property.

In accord with a resolution passed by the Dairylea Delegate Body at its 1989 Annual Meeting, the Legislative Committee is actively supporting the passage of a bill (S.B. 1326) introduced by State Senator Roger Madigan (R-Williamsport) that takes into account the farmers' concerns with wetlands regulations.

The committee is networking with the approximately 650 Dairylea member farms in Pennsylvania. The letter-writing campaign is focused on five major points:

- Wetlands policy should be established through legislation, particularly S.B. 1326. The DER proposed regulations would impair farm operations and would be difficult to amend or overturn.
- Farmers should be compensated for lands taken out of production. Under the DER proposal, a farmer's property rights can be denied, without due process of law.
- The determination of a wetland's value should be made through a formal process and not based solely on the opinion of a field staff member, as indicated in the DER proposed regulations.
- The DER regulations invite delay. It is not unusual for it to take longer than a year for the DER to complete its review of a wetlands permit application. Under S.B. 1326, the DER could use a general permitting process, similar to that used by the Army Corps of Engineers, to expedite the review process.
- The effect of wetlands loss should be mitigated. Dairylea farmers view the creation of new wetlands as important and support the growth of wetlands that are truly of "exceptional value." However, farmers should be allowed to continue using wetlands that have been part of efficient farm operations.

Both the DER regulations and S.B. 1326 are in the review process. Dairylea's lobbying effort is aimed at ensuring that any state wetlands policy takes into consideration the farmers' views and provides compensation for wetlands taken out of farming operations.

Dairylea, a Syracuse-based dairy cooperative with 2,300 farmer members throughout the Northeast, participates in a milk marketing network stretching from Maine to Pennsylvania and Boston, MA, to Buffalo, NY.

Tractor Safety Program Offered

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Most rural and farm families are aware of the hazards associated with farm tractors and equipment. However, every year there are too many unfortunate accidents that result in deaths or injuries.

The Dauphin County Cooperative Extension office and the Upper Dauphin Young Farmers' Association are sponsoring a Tractor Safety Clinic for all operators of farm equipment. The program will be held on Thursday, May 31, 1990, at 7:30 p.m. at the Upper Dauphin Area High School, Elizabethville.

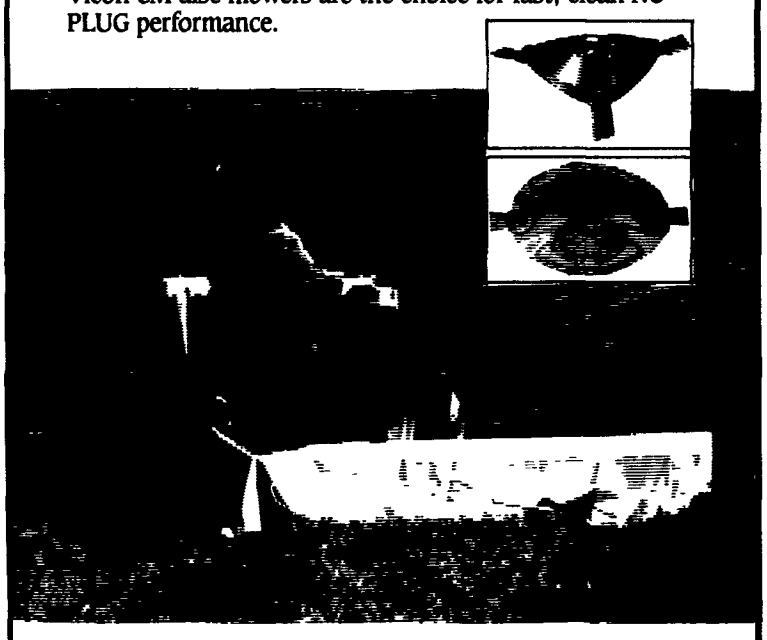
Pat Richey, ag engineer from Berks County Cooperative Extension, will discuss safe operation techniques.

Too often, accidents result from rusihing to get jobs finished. Before any accidents occur to you, your family, or your employees, take time to become aware of safety practices. For additional information, contact Paul Craig, (717) 921-8803 or Stanley Weaver, (717) 362-3666.

GET THE EXTRA EDGE

Put a Vicon three-bladed disc mower through wet, tangled crops – even fire ant hills – and then compare the difference.

With almost double the number of cuts per minute over two-bladed competitiors, and the extra suction created by Vicon's unique triangular discs, it's easy to see why Vicon CM disc mowers are the choice for fast, clean NO-PLUG performance.



Rugged, low profile cutterbars in 5'6", 6'9" and 7'10" widths, reversible blades and heavy duty discs, deliver reliability and capacity when time is tight.

Vicon's got the edge. The extra edge.

New Pork Products To Be Showcased At Expo

Producers will be able to see how a large part of their checkoff dollars are being invested by visiting the Pork Products Showcase in the Ag Building throughout World Pork Expo June 2-4 at the Iowa State Fairgrounds at Des Moines, Iowa. Consumers will also get to see some of the exciting new products being introduced at the nation's meat counters. Sponsored by Elanco Products Company, the Pork Products Showcase will display new pork products. Demonstrations of the latest meat cutting, cooking and marketing techniques will also be held.

Syndicated television celebrity chef Martin Yan will demonstrate the art of oriental cooking in two daily sessions on Saturday, June 2, and Sunday, June 3. The official Expo chef, Chet Holden, a well-known Missouri chef/restaurant consultant, will demonstrate ways to prepare pork for all occasions.

Another highlight of the Pork Products Showcase will be fresh boneless pork cutting demonstrations by members of the National Pork Producers Council (NPPC) merchandising staff.

NPPC and the Pork Industry Group of the National Live Stock and Meat Board will have displays in the showcase area showing producers how their checkoff dollars are being invested in research, promotion and consumer information efforts.

Samples of "Presidential Pork Rinds," a favorite of President George Bush, will be offered for Pork Products Showcase visitors. New pork recipe ideas and the latest nutritional information about pork will also be featured.

World Pork Expo is produced by the NPPC in association with the National Pork Board.

Mid East UDIA Reviews Promo Programs

COLUMBUS, Ohio — A retrospective of fluid milk advertising and an outlook on dairy promotion were the focus of Mid East United Dairy Industry Association's (UDIA) second annual meeting, held here in April.

More than 165 dairy producers, processors and related industry guests attended the meeting to "Focus on the Future" of dairy promotion.

Mid East UDIA President Herman Brubaker told the guests that "before we can be successful in our promotional efforts, we must first be prepared and focused on our goals and objectives for the future." He said that Mid East's advertising and promotion programs are a result of "sound planning, solid market research and strategic marketing."

Brubaker also noted the growth of commercial disappearance of dairy products over the past decade, attributing the tightened gap between supply and demand to dairy promotion programs, good marketing and a decrease in milk production.

While Brubaker did not suggest that dairy advertising is the sole source for the industry's success, he did say that since the implementation of the 15 cents per hundredweight promotion program, the dairy industry has enjoyed increases of more than three percent per year, for an increase in sales volume of nearly 7 billion pounds of milk since 1983.

Brubaker Recognizes Agreement With Pennsylvania

Further success in cooperation, to strengthen the dairy promotion investment, arises from the three-party "Promotion Partnership Agreement" between Mid East UDIA/The F.O. 36 Agency, The Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program, and The American Dairy Association and Dairy Council Inc.

This agreement calls for all advertising funds to follow the milk to market. It also eliminates the competition and solicitation of funds from producers, and allows for coordinated programming in the respective market areas, thus avoiding duplication of programs.

Brubaker said that Mid East/F.O. 36 Agency is especially proud to be a part of this "promotion coordination milestone" and looks forward to "continuing the successful working relationship into the '90s with such a promising marketing agreement."

Programs Focus On Consumer Needs

In outlining Mid East's marketing programs- advertising, retail merchandising, foodservice development, food publicity, nutrition education and communications- General Manager Scott Higgins noted that the association's strategy is to influence market demand of dairy products.

"Much of the success of the programs is attributed to recognizing a marketing opportunity and building sound consumer-directed strategies to reach our audience," Higgins said.

Mid East focuses on four principle products and develops marketing strategies based on a variety of factors such as return on investment, market potential and consumer acceptance. These four products are milk, cheese, butter and ice cream, with others incorporated into promotions on a seasonal basis.

"The focus of 1990", said Higgins, "will be to emphasize and expand current industry training programs for retail merchandising and foodservice distributors."

He explained that educating the personnel who represent dairy products to the consumer is crucial for successful promotion programs. He also said that Mid East, in coordination with the United Dairy Industry Association federation of 25 member organizations and affiliated Dairy Council units, is focusing on the constantly changing consumers to position dairy products to meet their needs, wants and expectations.

"As an industry, we must treat consumers as our number one customers and respond to their expectations," he said.

Higgins concluded by assuring the producers who fund Mid East's programs that the association is recognized and managed as an extension of every dairy farm operation collectively. The board of directors and staff of Mid East UDIA has dairy farmers' best interests in mind and will continue to develop programs designed to increase the demand for milk and dairy products.

Profiling the American consumer as "fast-paced, often misinformed, confused and health-conscious," director of nutrition education, Debbie DeLacey, prefaced Mid East's nutrition education programs. DeLacey said that "varied consumer profiles are the primary reason why a scientific, accurate and educationally sound nutrition education program is necessary and is an integral part of Mid East's programs.

"These programs and nutrition education materials contain key messages to create and maintain markets for milk and milk products," said DeLacey. "They highlight dairy product benefits to specific leader groups such as health professionals, educators and consumer leaders, who have an impact on people of all ages."

To counteract focusing on single issue controversies and avoidance diets, the Dairy and Nutrition Council-Mid East emphasis total diet and moderation, balance and variety with materials, film and loan projects, workshops, exhibits, newsletters and public service announcements and evaluation tools.

DeLacey said that many of these programs have the endorsement of recognized leading health care, educational and special interest associations.

Milk Promotion... A 40-Year Retrospective

Guest speaker Gary Horton, chief creative officer of D'arcy, Masius, Benton & Bowles/Chicago, presented a 40-year retrospective of milk promotion, tracing the way advertising strategies followed societal changes.

Horton noted that during the "traditional 1950s," when approximately 45 percent of milk purchases were home delivered, consumers were predictable and consistent. Milk had a wholesome image as an everyday beverage and faced little competitive challenges.

But political and social upheaval of the 1960s brought about new marketing challenges. The emergence of fast-food restaurants, more women joining the workforce and a leveling birth rate challenged long-standing traditions and values.

Soft drinks were aggressively repositioned from a treat to a beverage for anytime and anywhere.

Milk advertising reflected the consumer diversity of the era with commercials featuring teens, and women with decidely different ways and attitudes from their 1950 counterparts.

The "Me" decade of the 1970s emphasized individuality and self-fulfillment. The family structure changed, with more mothers working. Commercials targeted adults, teens and kids separately, using a contemporary lifestyle approach to show how milk "fit in."

Aging baby boomers, the return of traditional family values and a growing interest in health and fitness in the 1980s moved food marketers to become more nutrition-oriented. Commercials reflected how milk helps people look and feel better. Milk had become "America's Health Kick."

"It is the aging baby boomers," said Horton, "the 25- to 45-year-olds, along with young adults, who represent an important target audience comprising 48 percent of the American population and 40 percent of total milk consumption."

And to dispel a belief that milk is for someone younger, the dairy industry is positioning milk with a tongue-in-cheek message and persuasive adult image in its latest commercials, "Everybody Knows that Milk's For Babies." The "babies" are healthy, vibrant 18-49-year-olds who drink milk as part of their health kick.

Horton said that he could not predict the future of fluid milk advertising, and that the industry will look to consumers for the direction it must follow. "We must look at what consumers are doing and what the competition is doing.

Beef Barbecue Is The Pits — But It's So-o-o Good

JOYCE BUPP
York Co. Correspondent

DALLASTOWN (York Co.) It's a scene that sets the mouth to watering with anticipation.

Fragrant wood smoke rises in the early morning breeze, orange flames poking above a large steel box. As the pile of flaming hardwood inside the metal walls begins settling into a bed of gray-fringed hot coals, strong hands lift large chunks of meat dripping with juices, from a shiny barrel.

Black bits of peppercorns contrast to the translucent slivers of onion clinging to the shimmering surface of giant rounds of raw beef and fresh hams. With precision borne of experience, the hunks of meat are stripped onto an inch-thick steel rod, then fastened in place with long metal spikes rammed through the roasts and into holes drilled through the rod.

With the chunks firmly fastened, the rod and its burden of fresh meat are carefully lifted onto the metal box, pouring off warmth from the glowing bed of coals. One end of the rod is attached to a gearing mechanism hooked to a small motor mounted on the end of the 3 x 6-feet metal "pit barbecue." As the chunks begin slowly rotating above the coals, Jack Myers settles back with a cup of hot coffee, while trading jibes with his trio of assistants.

For the fourth consecutive year, the Dallastown farmer and his son, Andy, along with his cousin Dick Myers, Felton, and his son Huey have taken charge of the meat preparation for their annual Fitz family reunion. Over the last 15 or so years, though, Jack Myers has lost track of the number of times he has orchestrated this unique pit roasting for various family groups and organizations.

"I love good beef," grins this affable beef and crops producer. Myers, his wife Nancy, and their children have for many years maintained a cow-calf herd along with raising field and vegetable crops. Until recently, they retailed their produce at York's farmers' markets, where Nancy still works two days weekly for the new owners of their former stand.

As a beef producer and enthusiastic beef consumer and promoter, Myers is always on the lookout for delicious ways to prepare his favorite meat. His first taste of the tasty, tender, pit-roasted beef was at a cattlemen's field day held many years ago in Bedford.

The original pit roasting technique was exactly that - beef cooked buried in a pit dug in the ground. It goes in a trench excavated about to a depth of about four feet, two feet in width, and dug as long as necessary to accommodate up to hundreds of pounds of meat.

Hardwood or charcoal is burned down to a bed of coals at the bottom of the soil pit, then covered with an inch-thick layer of sand. The raw roasts, rubbed with oil, salt and pepper are wrapped in heavy butcher paper and cheesecloth, laid on the sand bed, and covered with tin before the pit is resealed with a layer of soil. After a cooking period of six to eight hours, the meat is juicy, tender, and ready for serving.

But unless a chef has a backhoe for excavation, meat cookery via the pit method can entail a lot of back-breaking shovel exercise. So after several years of helping to dig cooking pits, Myers was quick to appreciate the advantages of an above-ground method.

Fellow members of the South-central Pennsylvania Cattlemen's Association devised 55-gallon barrel cookers, split in half lengthwise and hinged, for roasting large chunks of beef for meetings and fund-raising events. When the group was asked to prepare beef for an open house at the Lewisberry Wild Horse Center, but to roast it in a way that would be visible to those attending, Myers put his farmer ingenuity to work on an open-pit version.

Once the fire dies to a bed of hot coals, the roasting process begins.

Jack and Nancy Myers prepare a large roast by rubbing salt and pepper onto the meat surface.

Jack and his cousin Dick Myers fasten meat to the rotating rotissiere by using steel crosspieces pushed through the roasts and the iron rod.

When he lights a match to the pile of fuel readied for firing up his rectangular, heavy steel pit-roaster, one thing is certain. The resulting coals will not be from commercial charcoal.

"I just don't care for the charcoal flavor. Wood gives meat a natural flavor," he says of the oak, hickory, maple or combinations of hardwoods used to burn down into the coals. Myers believes the charcoal taste he shuns may be carryover from fluids, like the commercial starters or sometimes kerosene, used in starting the briquets.

"Just how many wheelbarrow loads of wood we need on a particular day depends on the weather," Myers notes. Windy days cause faster burning, and eat up a larger pile of hardwood chunks.

Pit-cooking of these oversize roasts is not something done on the whim of the moment. It takes planning ahead. Myers places his orders for the 10-to-15 pound roasts, either top or bottom rounds of beef, in plenty of time to allow the Godfrey Brothers meats to select and cut the roasts to his specifications. Whole fresh hams are deboned, then wrapped in stockinette.

A day or two prior to cooking, Myers rubs salt and coarse pepper on the meat surfaces, then pierces them with a very thin, sharp knife or an ice pick for the flavoring to penetrate. Roasts are marinated for a least a day in oil, chopped onions, peppercorns and perhaps a bit of steak sauce, occasionally turning the meat to coat all sides.

Once the meat is over the bed of coals, it becomes self-basting in its own juice as it slowly rotates on the rotissiere. Roasting time is approximately four hours, depending on meat preference for rare or more well-done.

Major hurdle from roasting pit to fist-sized, hard-crusted deli rolls is removing the steaming, cooked meat from the searing-hot metal rods. Experience — and heavy gloves — help smooth the transition of roasts to the picnic pavilion's kitchen.

"Then let it stand about an hour and slice it real thin," advises Myers. "it just melts in your mouth."

Myers usually roasts about 110 pounds total of beef and pork for the more than 200 who attend the annual reunion dinner. Any leftovers stay on hand for the evening supper and are popular for take-home use as well.

Both the pit roasting of meat for the noon meal and holding the gathering on a Sunday are fairly recent changes to the more than 50 years of the Fitz family's annual get-together. Held in May, before the summer vacation season, the gathering brings relatives from as far away as Florida.

For several decades, members of the Fitz clan have been mainstays of York's farmers' markets, retailing a variety of fresh produce grown on farms located primarily south of the city of York. Two of the seven children from the first Fitz family to tend market and at least five descendants of the family continue to "stand" at the historic markets.

"Originally, the reunion was always held on a Wednesday, since there was no market that day. And something like a reunion was never held on a Sunday. At the beginning, tablecloths were spread on the ground to eat the noon meal, with every family bringing their own," recalls Myers. "Now the reunion supplies the meat and everyone brings a covered dish."

Traditions are part of family reunions, and "playing ball and good food" are the two that Jack Myers associates most with the Fitz convergence. Another favorite is for each family to wrap an inexpensive item, complete with mystery clues, for a guessing contest. First correct "guesser" wins the package, with the unclaimed packages auctioned off to benefit the reunion treasury.

Since "retiring" from market, Jack and Nancy Myers are turning more attention to the development of the family's 40-head herd of purebred Charolais, Simmentals and Red Angus. The Red Angus is a genetic mutation of Black Angus, with a warm, rusty-colored coat.

"I had read about them; then we bought our first ones at a sale in Virginia, about ten years ago when beef prices had dropped way down," recalls Myers. "The Red Angus breed has been developing about 50 years and was one of the first to do performance testing."

More recently, Jack and Nancy attended the Leachman Ranch's Red Angus sale in Billings, Montana, purchasing five cows and their calves. But he allows that all breeds have their good points.

"I want to see good growth and temperament, good milking and good mothering — easy keeping," he explains. "Fast growth denotes good, tender beef."

The Myers' five children exhibited offspring from the family beef herd for many years and continue their interest in the family business. Andy operates an adjoining farm and is employed by Springfield Township. Joe is the executive chef at Windows-On-The-Green in York, and daughter Kristy will graduate in December from York College with a marketing degree. Still at home are John, an ag-business major at Penn State York and Kenley, who shows beef and a few sheep in 4-H, and will graduate in June from Dallastown High School.

Even before the last slices of Fitz reunion pit roast meat are polished off between the sides of a crusty roll, Jack Myers is planning ahead for the next cookout. He'll be helping the Cattlemen's Association prepare pit roast beef at the Brown's Retail Market strawberry festival, Loganville, on June 9 to 10. If past history holds true, as many as 1,000 festivalgoers each day will feast on the juicy sandwiches and a host of strawberry treats.

Homestead Notes

On being a farm wife - And other hazards

Joyce Bupp

Ahhhhhhh, the first long holiday weekend of the summer season.

Across the county, millions of us take the opportunity to get outta' the house, throw a barbecue, hit the road, soak up rays on a wave-washed sandy beach or commune with nature from a campsite somewhere.

But I'll betcha' there won't be too many farmers among the Memorial Day long-weekend revelers.

Summer's three holiday weekends have a way of falling during some of the busiest times of the year, crop wise, at least for us dairy farmers in this part of the country. Now I'm not complaining, mind you. To the contrary. When we can get away for a few days, it's usually mid-week, at times less busy for vacation attractions than over peak holiday weekends.

Fact is, somedays I look around and think that, what many people take to the open highway in search of, we are so blessed with right here at home.

Green grass, towering shade trees, and almost constant cool breezes are part of the farmland. Of course, there might be the occasional "souvenir" in the grass left by Julia, our Houdini-escape-artist from the bred-heifer herd. And, sometimes the breezes wafting by are laden with good-old barnyard aroma, which is preferable to us more than the exhaust haze of a couple thousand automobiles backed up in a traffic jam somewhere. Guess it's all in what one gets used to.

Lots of folks take to the cool, refreshing atmosphere of the nation's waterways on holiday retreats. The ponds are a little small for waterskiing or power boating. The youngest, however, does dangle a fishline occasionally just to test the receptiveness of the crappies and bass to a worm unearthed from the rose bed, or to see if he can fake'em out with one of those ugly, purple, jelly-like bait imitations on his tackle box.

The beautiful Eastern mountains are a favorite retreat for many (us included), quiet, peaceful, and redolent of pine and deep-woodsy scents. But one of our favorite pursuits, birdwatching, is sometimes less productive there than on a stroll through the meadow. In recent sessions with the field glasses I've seen such firsts-for-me as a Carolina warbler - in migration perhaps - and a female indigo bunting perched atop a multiflora rose clump, preening her wet feathers after a bath in the creek.

In fairness, though, we've never watched a ruffed grouse spread its tail feathers in show here in the backyard, as we happened upon once in the central Pennsylvania mountains.

Still another favorite holiday pursuit of many families is visiting the zoo.

"This place is a zoo!" has slipped past my lips more than once - sometimes in reference to some unpredictable, bizzare chain of events, sometimes in commentary on the four-footed and feathered residents of the place.

Fact is, the zoo is often directly underfoot, even in-house lately. And, like all zoos, we find it necessary to separate those species which are natural enemies. On the domestic zoo level, for instance, we've found new meaning to that old cliche, "fighting like cats and dogs."

Our new resident sheltie (looks like a miniature collie), has proven to be a great dog. After being overly playful with the cats his first few weeks here, most of them have learned to simply ignore him. One mother, irate at his interest in her five kittens, bloodied his nose so badly last week that he now even shies away from his feed dish if a cat gets there first.

Exception is our house cat, Monkey. When he moved into her turf, Monk fled to the upstairs. With Solomon adapted to outside living, she has once again taken over as the downstairs monarch. If she sees the dog gazing longingly in through the screen door, she'll stand in full view inside, hissing at him, while he jumps up and down, barking, in frustration.

If anyone asks, we're spending our holiday at the zoo — refereeing the inmates.

Gold And Silver Collection Will Benefit Lebanon School

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

LEBANON (Lebanon Co.) — If it's money you want, then the New Covenant Christian School is the place to go on Friday, June 8, and Saturday, June 9.

To be auctioned at the two-day benefit sale, held at 900 S. 5th Avenue in Lebanon, is a collection of silver coins. The collection includes 49 silver dollars and 16 half dollars, from 1878 to 1990 with no duplication. Also, silver coins made by local coin clubs during the '60s and '70s feature pictures of local attractions. These include pure sets of silver and gold.

An anonymous doner gave the coins plus sterling silver plates and a 4-plate bicentennial set in 24 carat gold. These plates feature John Adams, John Hancock, Thomas Jefferson, and Caesar Rodney.

There is also a 36-piece silver presidential coin set that pictures all the presidents from George Washington to Lyndon Johnson and a 12-piece gold set of great moments in the life of George Washington.

"These are mint sets," said Marlin Heisey who works on the sale committee for the school. "Many of these are extremely rare."

If you are not interested in silver, the auction will have plenty of other items for sale.

Herb Keener, chairman for the sale, said that a chicken barbecue from 4 to 7 p.m. will begin the sale's festivities on June 8. A local singing group from Gingrich's Mennonite School will provide music while customers enjoy the meal and preview sale items. Beginning at 7:00 p.m., more than 100 Winross trucks will be sold, followed by the silver sale.

On Saturday, June 9, the auction will begin at 9 a.m. with miscellaneous items, flowers, and farm toys. Two 3-D pictures will go to the highest bidder at 12:30 p.m., and at 1:00 p.m., the quilt sale will begin.

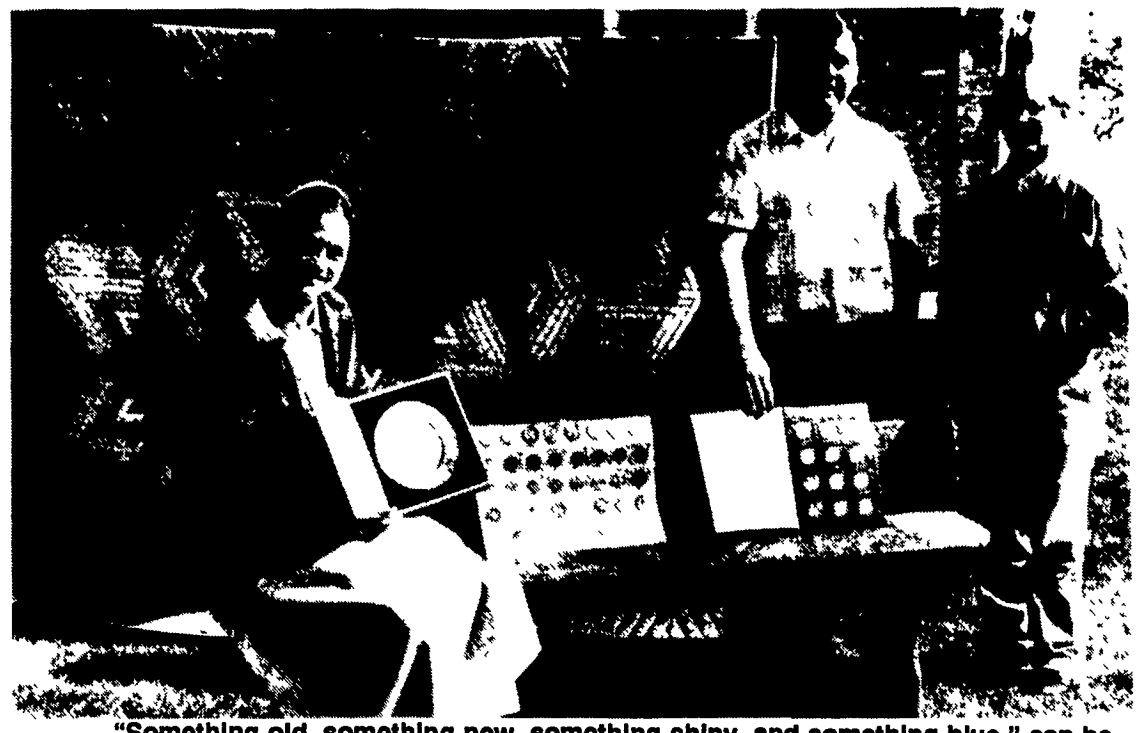
Beth Gingrich, coordinator for the sale, said that 12 fullsized quilts, 2 crib quilts, comforters, wall hangings, and a handwoven coverlet by Bill Leinback, Richland, have been donated.

Gingrich said, "We try to have popular color combinations and good quality in the quilts."

An electrical fire on April 30 destroyed much of the school and students in preschool through eighth grade are using facilities at a local church until renovations are made.

In addition to damaged classrooms, the school also lost its library. Keener said, the school is grateful for the help during cleanup, and that the sale proceeds will be used as operating funds. The goal for the benefit auction is $50,000.

For more information about the sale, call Herb Keener at (717) 274-3703.



"Something old, something new, something shiny, and something blue," can be found at the New Covenant Christian Day School Benefit Auction on June 8-9. From left: Beth Gingrich, Marlin Heisey, and Herb Keener display a chrysanthemum log cabin quilt, coin sets, and silver plates, and an old bench that will be auctioned during the two-day sale.

MICROWAVE MINUTES

By JOYCE BATTCHER

There's no better way to "bake" a cake in summer than in your microwave oven. It's cool, fast and convenient. But before you start, read through the following hints. Microwave cake "baking" is a bit different than conventional oven baking.

Most cakes microwave more evenly in a doughnut-shaped dish than in a round or square dish. Since the dish center is open (so microwaves can get to the other parts of the batter), cakes also cook faster.

If you don't have a ring-shaped dish, make your own by placing a small (about 2½ inches in diameter) drinking glass upright in the center of a microwave-safe round casserole or round cake dish.

Oil the dish lightly, using about ½ teaspoon cooking oil. With chocolate or other dark-colored cakes, sprinkle dish with granulated sugar so cake will come out easily. For other cakes that need extra color, sprinkle the oiled dish with a sugar-cinnamon mixture, fine graham cracker crumbs, crushed corn or wheat flakes cereal, or finely chopped pecans. Never coat oiled dish with flour or a tough, gummy layer will result.

Fill dish only half full. Microwave cakes rise higher, so a dish filled two-thirds full, like in conventional baking, will cook over.

Start cooking on a lower power. For the most even cooking and the most even texture, start cooking on Medium Low (30% power, about 200 watts) or Medium (50% power, 325-350 watts); then finish on High. Rotate dish several times during cooking.

If your microwave has a very uneven cooking pattern or if cakes usually don't get done in the center, set the cake dish on a microwave meat trivet or microwave-safe upside-down saucer during microwaving.

Don't overcook; do allow standing time. Your microwaved cake is done when it starts to pull away from the edges of the dish and the top looks cooked. The top may still be slightly moist in small cakes; but should look cooked in large Bundt-type cakes.

Check for doneness by lightly touching moist spots with a paper towel. If cake underneath is set, the cake is done. If cake under the moist spots is still doughy, microwave an additional 30 to 60 seconds. If using a clear dish, look at the bottom to see if it looks cooked.

Let cake stand in the dish, in the microwave, or set it on a wooden board or countertop. This holds in heat and lets the bottom finish cooking. With a small cake, after five minutes try inverting the cake onto a serving plate. If it doesn't release from the dish, turn upright and let stand about two minutes longer; loosen edges and center gently with a knife and invert. If the cake still doesn't come out, let it stand inverted over serving plate until it releases by itself. With a large cake, let it stand 10 minutes before inverting.

While the cake is still slightly warm, cover tightly to prevent it from drying out. Or cool completely, frost with a soft frosting and then cover tightly. Some moist, fruity cakes are best stored tightly covered in the refrigerator, especially in summer.

A friend gave me the recipe for Quick Raisin Cake. She bakes it in a greased 13x9 pan at 350 F for 35 to 45 minutes, cools it and spreads it with a super-rich, thick cream cheese frosting. I microwave it in about 20 minutes, cool it and spread with a light cream cheese glaze. Both ways produce a terrific tasting cake. And yes, the microwaved cake looks good. The dark color of the raisin pie filling, plus the coating for the cooking dish, give an attractive browned look.

Follow directions below for microwaving a regular cake mix. Most brands microwave well. If you have a favorite brand, check the package for microwave directions (or a toll-free number). Or, try one of the new microwave cake mixes. Follow package directions exactly, not the directions below.

Quick Raisin Cake

Fine graham cracker crumbs or finely chopped pecans
2 eggs, beaten
1 package (18.25 ounces) butter brickle cake mix
1 can (22 ounces) raisin pie filling
Cream Cheese Glaze (below)

Prepare microwave-safe, 10- to 12-cup fluted cake dish by oiling lightly and sprinkling evenly with fine graham cracker crumbs or finely chopped pecans; set aside.

Combine eggs, dry cake mix and pie filling. Beat by hand until no specks of flour remain. Pour into dish. Microwave on Medium (50% power, 325-350 watts) 15 minutes, rotating dish if necessary for even cooking. Rotate dish and continue microwaving on High, 3 to 4 minutes or until cake pulls away from edges and center of dish. Let cake stand in microwave or on flat surface 10 minutes. Invert onto serving plate. Cool completely and frost with Cream Cheese Glaze (below). Makes 14 to 16 servings.

Cream Cheese Glaze

½ of a 3-ounce package cream cheese
2 tablespoons butter
1 cup powdered sugar
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 to 2 tablespoons milk

Soften cream cheese and butter in a small microwave-safe bowl by microwaving (High) about 20 seconds. Stir in powdered sugar and vanilla until smooth. Stir in enough milk to make a glaze. Spoon over completely cool cake, allowing glaze to drizzle down sides. Makes about ½ cup.

To microwave a regular cake mix

Prepare a microwave-safe, 10- to 12-cup fluted cake dish as in Quick Raisin Cake (or, oil dish and sprinkle with a sugar-cinnamon mixture). Prepare cake mix as directed on package. (Do not use angel food or chiffon mix.) Fill dish only half full. (Make cupcakes from remaining batter.) Microwave as in Quick Raisin Cake, allowing 10 minutes on Medium-Low or Medium and 5 to 7 minutes on High.

For 9-inch layers: If cake is to be removed from dish, line dish with a circle cut from waxed paper; otherwise, lightly oil dish bottom. Fill dish(s) no more than half full. (Make cupcakes from remaining batter.) Microwave one layer at a time. Start on Medium (50% power, 325-350 watts) or Medium Low (30% power, about 200 watts) 7 minutes, rotating dish as necessary for even cooking. Then microwave (High) 1 to 3 minutes until cake starts to pull away from dish edges. Let cake stand in microwave or on flat surface to cool. If removing from dish, cool only 5 minutes.

Cupcakes: Fill microwave-safe muffin dish or custard cups no more than half full. Microwave 6 cupcakes on High for 1½ to 2 minutes or until no longer moist on top. (For 3 cupcakes, microwave about 1 minute.) Rotate cups, if necessary for even cooking. Cool in cups for about 5 minutes before removing to a rack to cool completely.

Recipes For A 'Berry' Good Taste

Could a strawberry a day keep cancer away?

U.S. Department of Agriculture scientists report that strawberries naturally contain an organic acid that medical studies show inhibits the start of some forms of cancer in laboratory animals.

A purified, commercially-made version of the acid has been used by medical researchers in cancer studies of rats.

"We've known for some time that strawberry roots, leaves and fruit contain organic ellagic acid. We're now studying the acid's genetics to see how it's inherited so we can breed plants for higher levels," said a plant pathologist.

The National Cancer Institute is funding research.

Although we don't know for certain how effective strawberries are in fighting cancer, we do know that the red, plump berries are the favorite fruit for many people.

Large strawberries are the best choice for eating as they usually have the sweetest taste. For canning and preserving, medium size, tart-flavored berries are the best.

Enjoy these recipes sent in by our readers.

1 cup dark corn syrup
1 cup warm water
1 teaspoon baking soda

In bowl, using a pastry blender, stir together flour, brown sugar, and salt. Cut butter until size of peas. Firmly press one third of mixture into greased 8x8x2-inch cake pan.

Stir together corn syrup, water, and baking soda. Slowly pour 1 cup of syrup mixture over the flour base in cake pan.

Gently run a fork through top layers (not bottom layers).

Bake at 350 degrees for 50 minutes. Cut in squares and serve warm with whipped cream.

ANSWER — E.S. of Hamburg wanted to know how to make cheese. Thanks to Therese Todd, Newville, for answering.

Cottage Cheese & Farmer's Cheese

Heat 1 gallon skim milk to 72 degrees. Add ½ cup buttermilk. Stir thoroughly. Cover to keep out dust, etc. Let stand 24 hours in warm place (70 degrees or warmer). When the milk has clabbered, cut curds slowly. Raise temperature to 104 degrees for about 30 minutes or until curds feel firm. If necessary, raise temperature to 120 degrees until curds are right consistency.

Rinse and drain curds, adding 1 teaspoon salt and 4 to 6 tablespoons cream to curds for cottage cheese.

For Farmer's Cheese, after rinsing curds, press in cheese cloth to form loaf. Weight with board.

Hard Cheese (Rennet)

Allow milk to stand at room temperature for a few hours. Mix 1¼ junnet tablets with each gallon of milk. Let stand undisturbed in warm place (85 degrees) until curd can be separated. Cut curds in ½ inch all directions. Mix thoroughly. Heat about 1 hour to 102 degrees, raising temperature 2 degrees every 5 minutes. Strain curds through cheese cloth. Shape into mold and press. It will take 12 hours in press. Dry cheese 4 days then either dip in parafin or salt it good to develop rind. Store in cool place such as a springhouse, shelf or root cellar.

To build your own cheese press. Remove top and bottom from a large #10 can. Punch holes from inside around bottom. Make keeper from wood just a bit smaller than can's diameter. Use two or three bricks - wrapped tightly in foil for weight.

Kid's Korner

The Moscow Circus that traveled from Russia to Lancaster County included 23 tigers, seven bears and 15 horses.

The Circus Comes To Buckwalter Farm

Daina Savage
Special to Lancaster Farming

LITITZ (Lancaster Co.) — Most children entertain thoughts of running away to join a circus, but for one little boy in Lititz, the circus came to him.

R. D. Buckwalter and his parents, Irel and Madelyn, played host to The Moscow Circus this week during its brief stopover.

The circus trainers pitched tents for their animals on the Buckwalter farm after finishing their last show in Cleveland and before boarding their ship in Philadelphia.

The American co-ordinator for the circus had worked through Lititz before with rock concerts, and thought of the town when he needed temporary accomodations for the animals.

The Buckwalters were happy to oblige, although according to Irel, "we didn't know what to expect."

What they got was an entourage of performing animals — 23 tigers, seven bears and 15 horses — in addition to the Russian handlers.

Although the circus wasn't performing, many curiousity seekers came out to the Buckwalter farm to see what was under the striped tent.

"We had a fair share of people out here," Irel said. Many families came out after school, he said.

R. D.'s class at Kissel Hill Elementary also made a field trip to the farm. They had many questions for the Russian interpreter, but most wanted to know how fast the animals could go.

The interpreter explained that how hungry the tigers were was an important factor in determining speed.

The children's teacher, Jodi Knighton, joked that the tigers "see a lot of tasty little meals" outside the bars of their cage.

The class enjoyed seeing the six tiger cubs that would grow up to be performers.

Perhaps Irel summed it best when he said that having the circus stay at his home "was like a fantasy come true."

R.D. Buckwalter, left, thinks a tiger cub would make a great pet. He is shown with a Russian trainer, right.

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

Having recently been through another election day, I can say that it is better to have a big turnout than a small one. And, I mean this in more ways than one. Many people do not show much interest in a Primary Election and only 20% voted this year. This left a lot of free time for the clerks and inspectors. It was a long afternoon but we did have a newspaper to read to pass the time.

Our Bible Study group has just finished their study of 1 Peter. The study was entitled, "A Faith More Precious Than Gold" by Gonzalez. We met in various homes and we took turns leading the study. Many people do not like to take charge of teaching and so our church has someone to "teach the teachers." Even so, sometimes the lesson is rather complex and hard to understand.

The other week I was privileged to visit the farm where my great grandmother Graybill was raised. The farm has a large house and barn and was built in a pretty setting near a spring. This farm is near my home, but I had not known the background of what is now an Amish homestead. A lady from Kansas, who was visiting in Lancaster County and who is interested in geneology, took me to this farm across the Conestoga River from my home. The family who lives there were preparing for church services to be held at their home that Sunday and they were very busy. The lady is raising a lamb which she had tied near the back door. And as I was leaving, I was given two tomato plants-- a red one and a yellow one. I'm anxious to see what they will produce.

We also had an unexpected visit from a couple from New York state. They had traveled to Alaska with us several years ago. At first I did not recognize the man who rang our doorbell but when his wife got out of the car my memory was jolted. We had a pleasant Sunday visit with them.

Small Changes Let You Eat Right

Americans who make small changes in what they eat can make a big difference in their overall health, according to the U.S. Department of Agriculture. In response to research indicating consumers may be confused by -- and weary of -- seemingly conflicting advice on what they should and shouldn't eat, USDA has initiated a new "Eating Right... The Dietary Guidelines Way" campaign. The campaign takes solid nutrition research and translates it into practical things consumers can do every day to eat healthier. For example, USDA surveys show that salad dressings are a major source of fat in diets of many women. Using just one to two less tablespoons of salad dressing a day can bring some women's fat intake within levels recommended by nutrition experts.

Starchy Foods Can Be Low-Calorie Foods

Starchy carbohydrate foods like pasta and bread are often considered fattening foods. Dieters and non-dieters alike, however, could benefit from taking a fresh look at these foods. A diet that includes more starcy foods doesn't have to be high in calories.

The most efficient way to reduce the number of calories you consume is to cut down on fat. Gram for gram, fat contains twice as many calories as carbohydrates.

Eating less fat could improve the diet of most Americans. High levels of fat in the diet have been associated with major health problems like obesity and heart disease.

Americans now obtain 40-45 percent of their energy from fat but it would probably be healthier to limit fat intake to 30-35 percent of the total calories consumed. Eating more complex carbohydrate foods like pasta can help reduce the amount of fat you consume.

Some caution is required when adding more starchy foods to your diet. Starchy foods become high calorie foods when fried in oil, served in rich sauces, or topped with butter. If fatty toppings are minimized then the calorie count can be kep under control. One cup of plain, cooked noodles, macaroni, or spaghetti has only 200 calories.

Preparing low-fat pasta dishes doesn't mean you'll have to sacrifice flavor. Layer lasagna noodles with low-fat cottage cheese, cooked spinach, mushroom-tomato sauce, and mozzarella cheese. This may be just the way your children will enjoy eating spinach and one serving can have as few as 224 calories.

A variety of vegetables can be prepared with pasta. Saute onion, carrots, green pepper, cucumber, zucchini, tomatoes, and parsley and toss into a big bowl of spaghetti. Or top spaghetti with a spoonful of stewed tomatoes and grated cheese. Egg noodles can be flavorfully combined with cauliflower and broccoli.

A mixture of parsley, chives, basil, and dill can replace the butter often added to hot noodles. Mushrooms added to plain yogurt is another tasty topping. One tablespoon of chopped mushrooms adds only one calorie and one tablespoon of plain yogurt adds only nine calories. This mixture saves ninety calories if used in place of one tablespoon of butter.

Besides being low in fat content, enriched pasta also provides B vitamins and iron. The incomplete protein of pasta can be complemented with small amounts of animal proteins such as cheese, tuna, lean meat, and legumes. And eating more pasta can be economical as well as healthful. The Cooperative Extension is an affirmative action, equal opportunity educational institution.

Spinach Lasagna

3 10-ounce packages frozen chopped spinach
2 tablespoons vegetable oil
2 medium onion, chopped
2 cloves garlic, minced
1 8-ounce can mushrooms, stems and pieces, drained
3 15-ounce cans tomato sauce
1-1½ teaspoons salt
1 teaspoon basil
1 tablespoon oregano leaves
¾ pound lasagna noodles
2 pounds lowfat cottage cheese
¼ cup Parmesan cheese
8 ounces mozzarella cheese, shredded

Cook spinach until just done. Drain very well. In another saucepan heat the oil and saute onion, garlic and mushrooms until the onion is soft. Add the tomato sauce, salt, basil and oregano and simmer 5-10 minutes. Cook the lasagna noodles for 10 minutes in 3 quarts of boiling, salted water. Blend cottage cheese until smooth and combine with Parmesan cheese. To assemble: Layer the ingredients in a 15 x 9 x 2-½ inch lasagna pan. Make the first layer using ⅓ of the noodles, ½ of the spinach, ½ of the cottage cheese mixture, ⅓ of the sauce and ⅓ of the mozzarella cheese. Repeat for second layer. Top with remaining noodles, sauce and mozzarella cheese. Bake at 350°F. for 35-40 minutes.

Yield: 12 servings. Calories: 224 per serving. (Note: Leftover lasagna can be frozen in portions and reheated.)

How To Build Healthy Family Relationships

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

MANHEIM (Lancaster Co.) — Sherrie and Don Wenger, active leaders of the Manheim Young Farmers, are involved with a lot more than cows.

They work with Springs of Water, a home for women with life controlling problems such as incest, drugs, alcohol, and emotional problems.

Sherrie's parents, Carl and Jean Shelly, founded the facility and with Sherrie, another daughter Debbie and their husbands, and an "adopted" daughter Diane make up the staff.

As a close, loving family, they are concerned about many who suffer from poor family relationships.

Recently, Sherrie, Debbie, Diane and Jean shared ideas for parents and children to develop close relationships with each other.

"Our friends always had more freedom than we did," Debbie recalls.

And while the daughters were sometimes embarrassed by their parents' strictness, they recall that their friends always wanted to hang out at the Shelly home.

"The trouble with most parents is that they want their kids to like them and they are afraid if they put too many restrictions on them, they won't like them," Sherrie said. "Kids are given too much trust before they earn it."

Jean said, "Kids should be taught that if they are part of the family, they have privileges and responsibilities.

She believes that kids are given too many options. For example, she believes that children should not be given the choice to either go bicycling with parents or stay home and read a book.

Jean said, "They should be told the family is going for a bicycle ride and be expected to participate. Allowing them to sit in a corner and do their own thing causes them to withdraw and become moody."

Jean strongly stresses the need for families to do things as families, not as groups.

"We went camping almost every weekend over the summer. And we didn't constantly drag other kids along because we wanted a close family relationship," Jean said.

Sherrie and Debbie grew up with such strong ties that at one time when the girls were placed in separate bedrooms, they always ended up sleeping together anyway and so their mother moved them back into the same bedroom.

Work, is another avenue for families to develop closeness.

Sherrie said, "As soon as we were big enough to carry a dust cloth, we started helping with the cleaning."

Each girl had her own chores, but the weekly house cleaning was done together as a team.

Jean advises parents to follow through with every command. "That was my basis for parenting. I never promised anything that we did not follow through."

Her own childhood, Jean recalls, was quite different. Then her mother constantly nagged and threatened the children with "Wait till your daddy comes home. You're going to get it."

Jean determined that her children would be raised differently. She said, "I warned my children one time. If they didn't listen, they got a swat with a fly swatter or a paddle. They weren't very old before they seldom needed to be disciplined. As they grew older, other forms of discipline were used.

Deb remembers that as a child she rode her bike several blocks further than the approved route. She did not get to ride bike for a week after that.

When dating age arrived, curfew was midnight and when one of the daughters arrived home an hour late, both she and her boyfriend were sat down and the issue was discussed between parents and the couple.

Despite strong family ties, peer pressure influences every teen. When Sherrie was 15 and had an opportunity to run off to California with a friend. Although she wrote a goodbye note to her parents, she kept thinking about her parents.

"I had a healthy fear of disappointing them," Sherrie recalled. So, instead of running off to California, she ran home and tore up her note. It wasn't until many years later that Sherrie told her parents about the event.

When Debbie went off to college, she found her parents morals so strongly instilled within her that she did not take advantage of any more freedom away from home than if she were home.

"We were taught respect for authority. We did not have problems with teachers, jobs, and others because of that," Deb said.

In comparison, Diane, who participated in the Springs of Water program and to whom tthe Shelly's refer to as an adopted daughter, was raised in a home where bad behavior was threatened, but not punished until parental anger built up and then exploded.

Her parents did not punish and forget. Instead, they nagged, threatened and constantly threw up all past offences, months later.

Diane said, "If I disobeyed, they'd say, 'Do it again and see what happens.' I'd do it again. They'd tell me the same thing."

Some nights, Diane recalls, her alcoholic dad would wake her at 3:00 a.m. to beat her.

"My parents were quick to buy me things, but seldom spent time with me," she said.

They did not know that Diane had a drug problem when she was only 12. They did not know that was sexually abused as a child. They did not understand why she tried to commit suicide.

Diane left home when she was 14. Her teenage years were a complex mess and when she entered a heroin detox center, her parents were shocked.

In desperation, Diane entered the Springs of Water program. When she first met the Shelly family, she hated them. She was frustrated that she could not manipulate them. The first day she kicked over a bucket of water in the kitchen. "I flopped on the sofa and flipped through a magazine," Diane recalled. "I figured that they knew I had emotional problems and would leave me alone."

Instead, Diane was given an ultimatum: either she clean up the water or leave.

She cleaned up the water.

But learning discipline did not come easily for Diane. She said, "Being a part of the Shelly family is like having a mirror in front of you. They hold you accountable in a loving way."

Diane, who had always run from confrontation, heard the Shelly's

MANHEIM (Lancaster Co.) — Dressed in bib overalls, a dusty cap, and a tattered cotton sweater, 88-year-old Chester Hummer prepared a child's rocker for a final coat of varnish on Monday.

"I don't advertize. I just do my work," he said.

Since 1932, Hummer has been refinishing furniture in his small barn on the edge of Manheim.

His finished work speaks of the skill and care that he puts into the fine antiques that set in a section of the barn waiting to be picked up by the owners.

He brushes aside any praise that others say of his work with the remark: "Don't brag. If you talk too much you're liable to lie."

He works with fine woods that have been scratched, painted, broken, and weathered by time. Through patience and skill, he lovingly restores wood to its original sheen. He reglues joints and if pieces are missing, he makes a new turning to match.

Chester Hummer

Although he has some massive, elaborately carved pieces, he takes as much care with plain wooden boxes for he asks, "Does the better piece dim the lesser one? What I think and what another thinks is nicer will be different and who is to say which piece is the better?

The time required to finish a piece is no concern to Hummer. He said, "I just keeps working no matter how long it takes."

But each day, he first does what he doesn't like to do — first. Hummer said, "I've learned that in school."

As his fingers run over the 1799 blanket chest, he talks about the refinished chairs setting in the corner that now need to be caned. He said, "I don't do caning. I've got to stop somewhere."

He prefers the solitary of working alone. "That way there is no fighting," he explains.

Working alone also offers him the opportunity to work as he pleases. He works on the pieces according to whim — not in the order they came. He takes time to watch the birds that congregate on his small farm and he reads the newspaper each day.

The octogenarian gives wry smiles and quotes wise sayings as he speaks of his life. He neither worries about the past nor the changes the future may bring because, he asks, "What's the use of worrying? Pack up your trou-

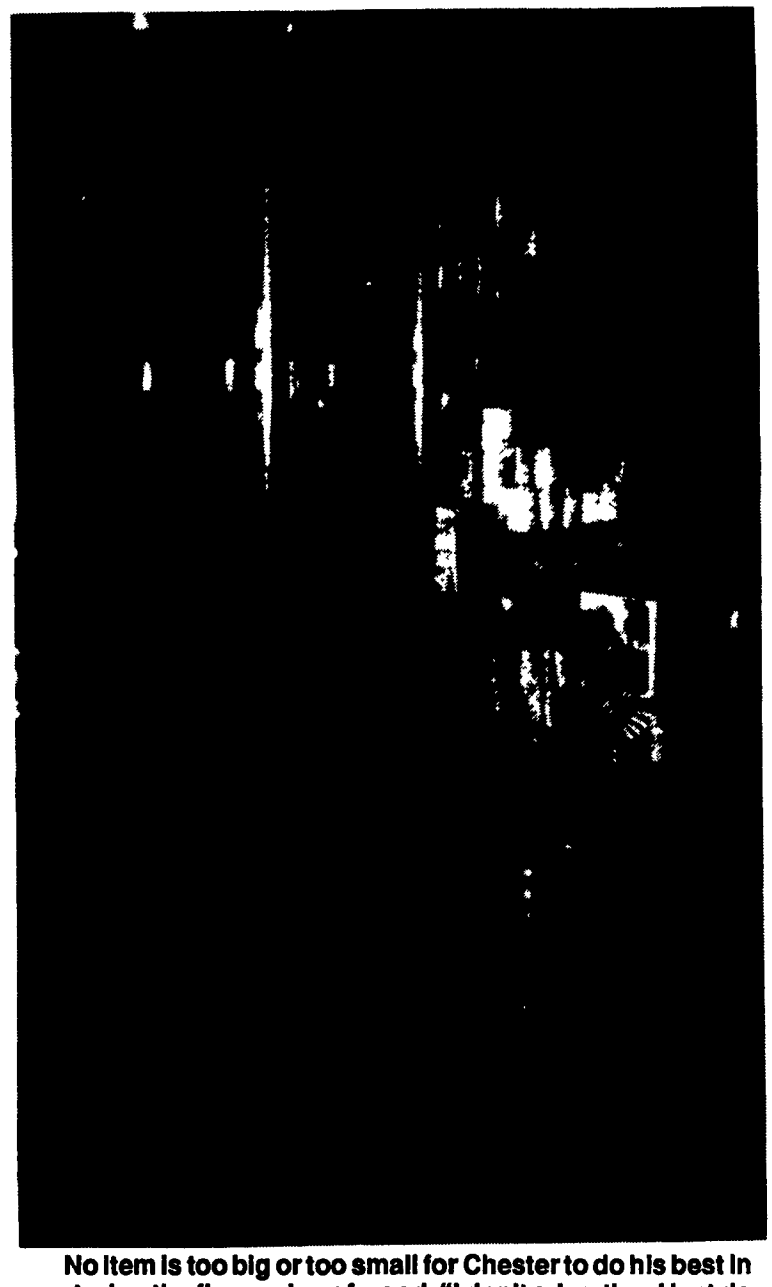
Chester enjoys a laugh with a friend who drops by to admire the work.



No item is too big or too small for Chester to do his best in restoring the fine grains of wood. "I don't advertize. I just do my work and that speaks for me," the 88-year-old said.

Ideas For Home Accessories

DAUPHIN (Dauphin Co.) — "You don't need patterns for everything," Naomi Lord told participants at the Home Accessory Workshop held at Berks County Agricultural Center on May 17.

"Try making a pattern yourself and you'll find it's surprising what you can do."

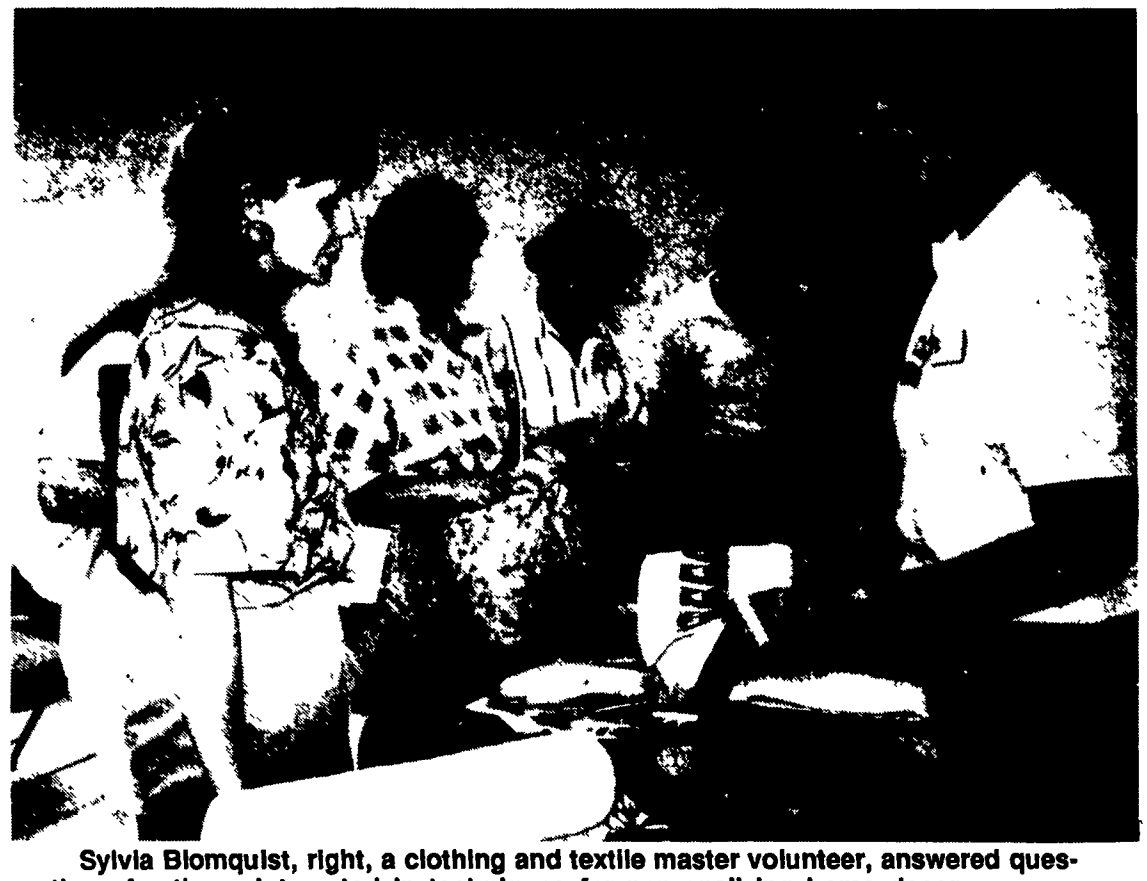
Lord and three other clothing and textile master volunteers who work through the extension displayed pillows, pot holders, tablecloths, bun warmers, appliance covers, shower curtains, and other creative accessories made without patterns.

For applique and stencil patterns to add finishing touches to napkins, tablecloths and other items, Lord said, "I trace pictures from kid's coloring books."

JoAnn DeCesar showed participants how easy it is to use an overlock sewing machine for edging on napkins and tablecloths for heirloom techniques.

During the workshop, participants had an opportunity to examine the projects, ask questions, and trace patterns.

Home accessory workshops are scheduled in other counties through the extension office. Contact your county extension office for dates.



Sylvia Blomquist, right, a clothing and textile master volunteer, answered questions for those interested in techniques for personalizing home decor.

Naomi Lord, left, encouraged participants at the workshop to use patterns from coloring books for appliques and stencils.

Shower curtain

Measure width of tub. Add 1½ inches for side hems. Measure desired length plus 12-inches for a double 3-inch hem at top and bottom.

Interface top and stitch 3-inch hems at top and bottom. Sew evenly spaced buttonholes at top so that shower curtain hooks can be inserted.

Stencil edges and hems of shower curtain or stitch on a border or applique in a contrasting color.

Pillows with shirred cording

Corded seams can be made of matching or contrasting fabric. To begin, measure pillow width and diameter and add an extra inch on each side for seam allowances and ease in inserting the pillow. The size of the filler cord and the seam allowances needed determine the width of the bias strip to be cut. Lay a piece of cord diagonally across a corner of the fabric. Fold the point over the cord and pin fabric together so that cord is tightly enclosed. Measure the width of seam allowance from the pin and trim point off fabric. Cut the second layer of fabric the same width. Measure the distance between the two cut edges. This measurement will be the width of the bias strip needed.

Fold the crosswise grain of the fabric to the lengthwise grain; this forms the true bias. Cut along this fold. Use a ruler to measure the required width from the true bias edge. Mark with tailor's chalk. Measure and mark as many strips as you will need. Cut on the markings.

Always seam a lengthwise end to another lengthwise end and a crosswise end to another crosswise end. Match any prominent weave, stripes, or design on the fabric.

Lay cord on fabric bias strip and stitch with a zipper foot. Pull cord say, "You need to talk about it."

Eventually, Diane gained respect for this family that she defines as " very loving and yet firm."

But she said unlearning old habits has been a long process. Although she has made great strides, she said that her childhood training affects even the way she trains her dog.

She explains, "When I was trying to house train my dog Issac, he had an accident in the morning. That evening when Issac jumped up on the bed, I scolded, 'Bad dog. Remember what you did.'"

Jean pointed out to Diane the importance of forgiving and forgetting. Because a person or a dog makes a mistake, you don't make them suffer the rest of the day or forever.

Although Carl and Jean raised their children with healthy discipline, the results of Jean's own haphazarded upbringing had long lasting results. It was through her own struggle with overcoming these problems that the ministry at Springs of Water was formed.

Jean recalls that she felt rejected by her father, had a temper and took pills for her emotional problems until she was 31 years old.

For years, she suffered with asthma, allergies, arthritis, a spasmatic colon, and endometrimoditis.

In desperation, she asked for prayer and through applying scripture to her circumstances, she was completely healed.

Her life was so transformed that Jean began helping other women who suffered from life controlling problems. The Springs of Living ministry is built upon applying bibilical principles. To learn more about the program, call (717) 665-7906.

bles in a little kid bag and smile, smile, smile."

"Everything important — I've learned in the little red school house," he said.

It was there, that Hummer often earned prizes for his water coloring pictures.

At 21 years of age, Hummer left his father's farm and took a job refinishing automobiles in Elizabethtown, but always he dabbled in refinishing furniture.

In 1932, he bought his present property and set up shop and in 1933, he married Mary Sharp, an insurance agent who died 40 years ago.

Of the lawn that surrounds his house and shop, Hummer said with a mischievious grin, "The landlord mows it." Then adds, "I'm the landlord and the walking does me good — I wouldn't have one of those things you ride."

Although he daily puts in a full day from 7:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. daily, he claims, "I am retired. You ought to have seen the dust fly when I was younger."

When asked if he doesn't get tired of working everyday and if traveling doesn't appeal to him, Chester is quick to respond, "Gee Whiz, no. I'm much more comfortable at home."

He adds, "There's enough to see in Pennsylvania without traveling throughout the world."

Nine years ago, Hummer became severely ill with a tumor on his pancreas. Doctors gave him six months to live. At that point, he moved in with his sister-in-law, Anna Hummer. Amazingly, he recovered and is in fine health today. Although he continues to eat and sleep at Anna's home, he drives alone to his shop to work every day and maintains his house on that property.

Nurses, he said, call his work therapy. It's good medicine, they say.

But Hummer asks, "What do they know? When I'm dead, I'll be dead a long time so I just keep scratching away."

While many ask for Hummer's secret for healthy old age, he responds, "I'm the temple of God and Christ lives inside me. Every day I just do my job. When it's my time to go, I'll go."

Lancaster Society 14

The Lancaster Farm Women Society #14 on April 5, enjoyed a one day trip to Somerset County for the 43rd Annual Maple Festival.

A sausage pancake with delicious maple syrup. Members first welcome feature upon arrival. A quilt show tour of the old Meyer home, and observing the many displays of various crafts followed. Members also observed cooking-off the syrup. The last stop was at the high school to be entertained by two musical groups.

to shirred fabric. When enough length is shirred, lay shirred cording on top of pillow fabric and stitch through all thicknesses with a zipper foot. Allow enough opening to insert pillow. Stitch opening by hand.

Towel trim

Sew together four 1¼-inch strips of different colored fabrics. Press the strip so all the seam allowances go the same direction. Using a 60 degree triangle template, cut the strip into triangles, turning the template upside down to cut the next triangle. Continue reversing the template while cutting until you have enough triangles for the desired length of the trim.

Sew the triangles together. Press, postion on towel and sew onto the towel using a satin stitch. Another method for placing the trim is to turn under a ¼-inch seam allowance on top, bottom, and sides, and top stitch it to the towel.

Faye Strickler, home economist for Berks County, admires the appliance covers that the clothing and textile masters made without using a pattern.

WHY GROW ANYTHING BUT THE BEST?

Your herd's potential is money in the bank — Protect your investment! Select your sires carefully. Call for results comparing Duroc with other breeds and hybreds. You can see how superior the Duroc Boar is in producing offspring that excel over all others in the areas of rapid growth, feed efficiency and preformance! Even on a small scale, a quality Duroc Boar can improve your end product and profit margin.

THE FACTS SPEAK FOR THEMSELVES

Knowing the interest in production tested boars we offer days to 230 pounds and backfat figures on all our boars sold off the farm. We had the top indexing individual pen at the Maryland Boar Test and top indexing individual. This year we tested at the Ohio Boar Test, setting the all time record! for days to 230 pounds at Ohio. The results were:

	GAIN	BF	LE	DAYS/230
4-5	2.64	.74★	6.09★	133
4-8	2.66	.82	6.03	134
4-10	2.87★	.83	5.45	129★

milage
FORAGE BLEND

ProfiSeed, Inc.
Route 2, Hampton, IA 50441

What it is...
Milage is a unique blend of specially selected milo and soybean varieties that compliment one another to maximize forage yield, protein content and palatability.

What it does...
Milage is a versatile forage crop that offers many advantages.

HIGH YIELDS. Yields as high as 18 tons (50% moisture) can be obtained with high management techniques. Yields of 8 to 12 ton are easily achieved on soils with good water holding capacity and proper nutritional balance.

HIGH PROTEIN. Under the most ideal conditions, protein content can test as high as 18%. Generally, though, protein will most likely range between 12 and 16%.

TDN. Milage will consistently provide TDN levels of 60-65%.

LOWER COST. Compared to corn silage, Milage is a more economical crop to produce. No herbicide cost, no insecticide cost, much lower fertilizer costs and no cultivation add up to big savings on crop expenses.

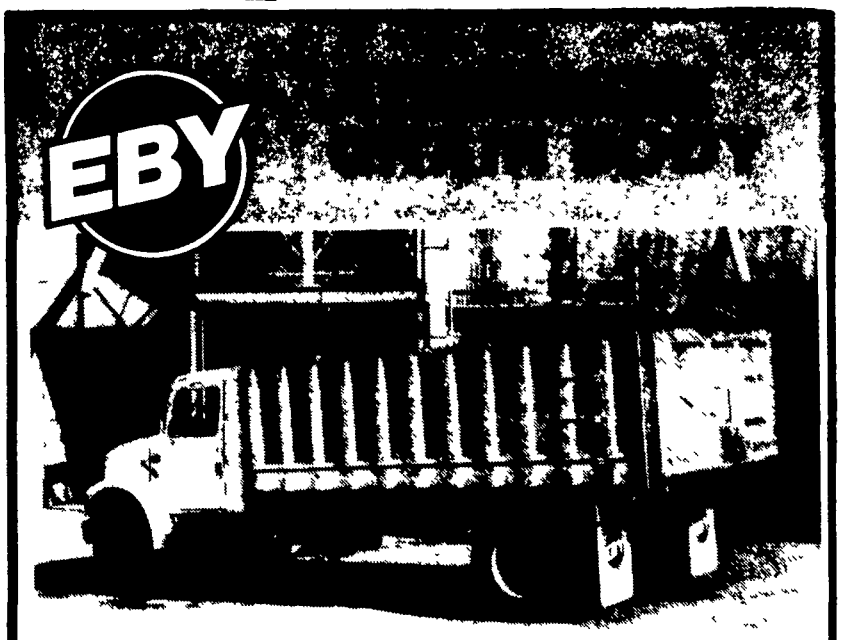
Got Grain? Then get the trailer that is Timpte tough... the Super Hopper. It's not only built to take it...it's also built to cut fuel costs. The Super Hopper is lightweight and aerodynamically designed to reduce wind drag. When there's grain to be hauled, Timpte does the haulin' best and pulls a lot easier than the rest.

M.H. EBY, INC.
Box 127, Blue Ball, PA 17506 (717) 354-4971



CONSTRUCTED FOR YEARS OF MAINTENANCE-FREE SERVICE.

You'll get more out of an Eby aluminum grain body. Lightweight and rugged aluminum provides rigid, fuel-efficient support to fill your grain hauling needs.

Eby packs years of experience, workmanship and performance into every aluminum body it manufactures. And special Eby options let you customize your body to your individual operation. Available in standard lengths, each unit is designed to provide you with an investment in durable performance and practical economy.

Look over these outstanding features.

- Less weight. Eby aluminum bodies weigh up to 30% less than comparable steel and wood construction
- Less maintenance. Aluminum construction won't rust or rot - never needs painting.
- Long-life durability. Heavy-duty structural components and hollow-tube frame combine with aluminum floor and sides to stand up to years of hard work.

24 foot Ruff Neck trailer on left is Eby's workhorse. Trailer on the right is an economical, 16 foot Wrangler.

Get outstanding value in EVERY Eby trailer.

Whether it's a top-of-the-line Ruff Neck or an economical Wrangler, you know your livestock trailer is built to last if it's from Eby.

Aluminum construction is one of the main reasons these trailers are so durable and reliable. They'll never rust through or need welding. In fact, without ever being painted, an Eby livestock trailer will stay looking new for years.

Standard features make your Eby trailer a profitable investment. Extra-heavy axles, brakes, wheels and tires. Thick aluminum sheet flooring. Sturdy posts and rails. Even an aerodynamically designed front end is standard.

And, while standard features make even the economical Eby Wrangler far more than an average economy-model, we custom-build everything we make. So you tell us what you want. Choose from a long list of options. Select those features you need for your particular operation. Whether it's a Wrangler or deluxe Ruff Neck, the trailer you buy will be the trailer you need.

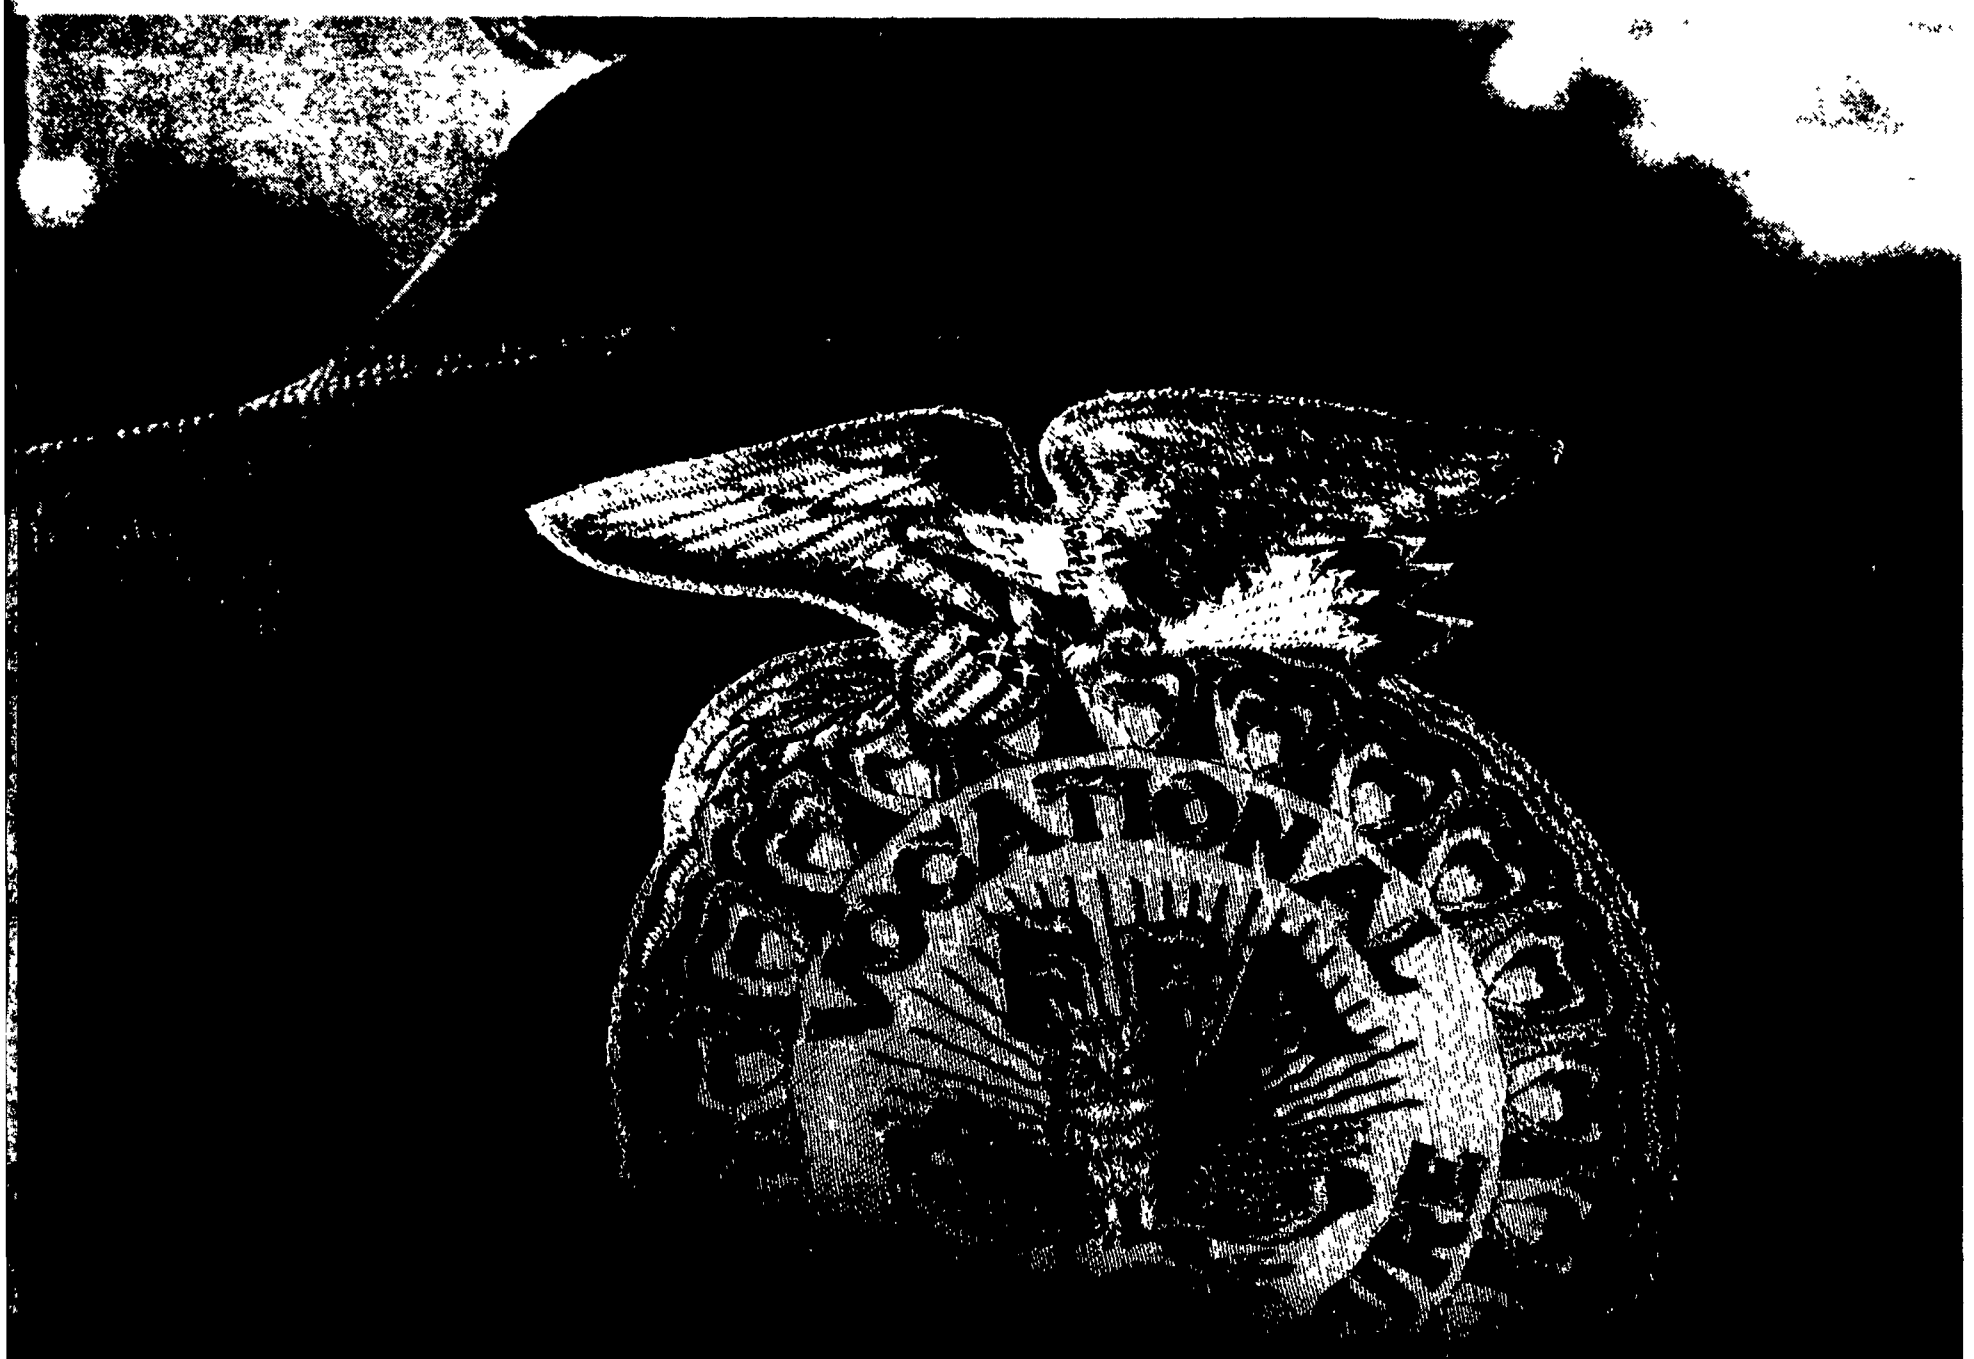
CARTER 1990



Only Farm Credit Has Loan Officers Who Were Trained In The Field.

While you were growing up on the farm going to 4-H, FFA, maybe even AG school, do you know what your Farm Credit loan officer was doing?

Same thing.

Not many bankers can say that.

True, they can make loans nine ways to Sunday. But, now your Farm Credit loan officer can, too. Over the last few years our people have gone through extensive training at making every kind of farm loan imaginable. Now a Farm Credit loan officer can give you the lowdown on rates, options and creative financing as well as any city banker can.

And around here, our Farm Credit loan officers have the power of approval that's equal to most bank presidents.'

So the next time you need to get a farm loan, think about this for just a moment.

Then let one of our Farm Credit loan officers prove to you what we've been saying all along. That bankers can't be farmers. But farmers can be bankers.

FARM CREDITSM

Nobody knows the field better.

Gypsy Moths Can Get Into Homes

WILKES-BARRE (Luzerne Co.) — Everyone probably has their fill of gypsy moth by this time. The problem is not over and won't be until the end of July.

However, the problem with the small insects getting on the sides of homes and into homes will be over in 10 days to two weeks, possibly less. It depends on the weather and over how long a period they will be hatching, said Al Skala, Penn State, extension agent.

At this time, the problem is the tiny black insects that are landing on the sides of homes and on clothes that are hung outdoors. The insects are getting on people and coming indoors. This small stage is hairy, light, and has about a foot-long thread. In this form it can get into the air stream and travel for miles before alighting on your property. Many questions are being asked.

First, the fact that the insects are getting into the house is cause for concern only because they are a nuisance. They will cause no problems in the house as long as there are no plants on which they can feed. Without food they will die in a few days. They will not feed on clothes or anything other than plants. In the house, the better remedy is to sweep them up with a vacuum sweeper and burn the bag.

They appear to be biting. Actually there is a material on the hairs of the worms which will cause a stinging sensation to people who are sensitive to it. Children especially may come down with a rash which can be treated as any other rash. Many adults are also sensitive and may get a rash.

Many are concerned with the insects on the sides of homes and areas immediately around homes. Most of the insecticides act on the insect after the insecticide has been ingested. Imidan, methoxychlor, and orthene are insecticides that can be sprayed directly on the insects and give some relief. Many are recommending Sevin, which will do a good job and possibly too good. It will kill many of the predator insects which feed on the gypsy moth.

Spraying will have little or no affect on this problem until the insects have begun to feed. BT (Bacillus Thuringiensis), which is being used, will not have an affect on the worms until they ingest the material. Some of the insects are in the trees and are feeding. The BT will kill these in a few days after ingesting.

As homeowners, you can use BT, imidan, methoxychlor, and orthene to spray plants and get good results. Sevin can be used, but only if one of the other insecticides does not give good results.

The next problem will be during the time they will be feeding. Trees will be defoliated and their droppings will be appearing.

Once the insects are done feeding, sometime in July, they will begin migrating to find an area to go into the next part of their life cycle, the resting stage. From the resting stage they will emerge as moths, mate, and lay eggs for next years crop. From then till next year at this time the problem will be over.

Profitability, Environmental Concerns Vital To Farming

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

LITITZ (Lancaster Co.) — "Agriculture as a whole, in the last 5 to 10 years, has simply just become more aware of its impact environmentally," said Michael W. Brubaker, agronomist and president of Brubaker Agronomic Consulting Service, Inc. The consulting firm serves 500 clients in the southeastern and central part of Pennsylvania, as well as Maryland, Delaware, and New Jersey.

"Five years ago, you would probably have to look awfully hard to see somebody calibrating a manure spreader," he said. "What we found is generally they're pretty accurate. If we're shooting to put on 12 tons of manure, often times we'll have a plus or minus 10 percent variation, which we think is very good."

How many nutrients

Once Brubaker knows what the variation is, he can "work inside of that variation without overloading the soil." Tests have now determined how many nutrients different soils can hold before leaching begins. Calibration involves knowing what types of manure will be applied and how much the soil will be able to absorb.

"We also do a lot of manure analysis, which again has not been practiced all that much in the past. But from five years ago forward, manure analysis and spreader calibrators have skyrocketed. We perform several hundred manure analyses per year." Brubaker said that manure analyses vary from one laying barn to another and one dairy farm to another.

"One of the best management strategies a farmer can adopt is the implementation of a good nutrient management plan," he said, "to understand if they are generating more manure than what their land can handle. And if so, examine some strategies on how they might be able to move some manure off their farm." Farmers must find out if the manure or commercial fertilizer they apply is necessary.

"Do you already have enough nutrients in the manure you're generating? That's what a nutrient management plan will tell you," he said.

Nutrient management bill

Brubaker is convinced that a nutrient management bill will be passed and will require farmers to perform nutrient mangement planning on their farm. "Nutrient mangement planning will occur in Pennsylvania, in my opinion. There's no question about it."

He believes that the costs to a farmer for a plan are not significant. "What concerns me is the recommendation of the nutrient management plan if the plan calls for hauling the manure off the farm. What are the associated costs going to be? Or the associated costs of building a manure storage facility?"

Brubaker's nutrient mangement company, Nutrient Resource Management Inc., acts as a "broker" in marketing manure to farmers who need it. "You need to have a broker to call on the telephone to say I have an excess of 120,000 gallons, can you move it for me? A broker will go to work to try to find a safe, reliable home for that 120,000 gallons of manure. And you would try to market it effectively for the farmer."

Studies have been undertaken by various conservation districts and universities to determine groundwater nitrate levels, and have been shown to be on the increase. But Brubaker questions agriculture's role in the nitrate increase. What percentage is the result of farming?

Nitrate problems

According to Brubaker, when it comes to nitrates, agriculture is just one piece of a large puzzle. The residential community appears to contribute significantly to the nitrate problems also through unmonitored septic facilities and heavily fertilized lawns.

Brubaker is also involved in integrated pest management. "We feel that is our second strength, right behind soil fertility. We scout every acre that's enrolled in our program. We have a lot of summer interns to help scout fields. The data that we collect daily on farms is recorded into the individual's file. All of the field data is examined prior to making a pesticide recommendation."

Brubaker primarly recommends in-season controls. "As our firm develops our integrated pest management strategies, less preventative treatments are necessary," he said.

Brubaker's firm takes steps to examine the environmental consequences of each product, and he enters that into the formula when they make a selection. According to Brubaker, "We do not make our recommendations based solely upon price. Several factors, in addition to price, that we regularly analyze are soluability, toxicity, availability, performance, and past environmental records."

Groundwater problems

"As more farmers attack nutrient problems through nutrient management planning, less of the nitrates in our wells will be of an agricultural origin," he said. "I am anxious for the day that the environmental spotlight moves away from our farms and onto other areas of our community."

Corn herbicides are being traced in well water more frequently than other kinds of pesticides. But according to Brubaker, if corn herbicides are used properly, "I believe they're not going to end up in the well water. It's the soluability of the corn herbicide that we need to understand. How soluable is it? How quickly is it going to move down through the soil profile into the groundwater?"

Our goal

"We tell our clients that our goal is not to go in and cut his inputs down by 50 percent," said Brubaker. "Our goal is to go in and examine profitability — make sure the inputs the farmer is currently using are profitable.

"We have evolved, to a two-tiered plan: environmental stewardship and farm profitability. Frankly, I believe our clients are currently placing environmental stewardship ahead of profitability.

"We want to reach that pinnacle of profitability on every acre of our contracted land all the time," said Brubaker. "So we never want to apply any more pesticide than is necessary and we never want to apply any more fertilizer than is necessary.

"What I think we need to do as an agricultural community is make sure we get the kind of nutrient management that we can live with, while simultaneously being attentive to the environmental concerns," he said.

"Agriculture as a whole, in the last 5 to 10 years, has simply just become more aware of its impact environmentally," said Michael W. Brubaker, agronomist and president of Brubaker Agronomic Consulting Service, Inc. The consulting firm serves 500 clients in the southeastern and central part of Pennsylvania, in addition to Delaware, Maryland, and New Jersey.

Nutrient Reduction Important To Bay

LITITZ (Lancaster Co.) — People are becoming more concerned each day about the pollution of the Chesapeake Bay. The problems stem, in large part, from increasing nitrate loads in the water because of runoff and leaching.

In 1987, the Chesapeake Bay Agreement was established to put into effect a plan, by July 1988, to begin the reduction of nutrients flowing into the bay. The plan calls for a 40 percent nutrient reduction by the year 2000.

In February, Michael W. Brubaker, president of Brubaker Agronomic Consulting Services, Inc., spoke to farmers at an open house sponsored by Binkley & Hurst Brothers in Lititz. Here are some of the highlights of his discussion:

- Farmers not implementing proper nutrient management techniques may be contributing to the nutrient load of our local waterways and ultimately to the Chesapeake Bay. Tremendous strides have been implemented toward reducing agriculture's adverse impact on the bay.
- The 21-foot deep bay is filling with silt due, in part, to farms without adequate conservation practices.
- The bay is a very productive ecosystem. While our agriculture produces 3 to 5 tons per acre of carbon per year, the bay produces 5 to 15 tons of carbon per acre per year.
- The Chesapeake Bay Agreement set a nutrient reduction goal of 40 percent by the year 2000.
- House Bill 1838 requires farmers with concentrated animal operations to submit a Nutrient Management Plan. House Bill 1980 requires the individual writing the plan to be "licensed" and the fertilizer dealer would be required to keep nutrient records.
- As a result of pressure from environmentally minded citizens, our state legislature is compelled to examine legislative controls to limit the overnutrification of our lakes and groundwater.
- While 39 percent of the available nitrogen in the soil comes from commercial fertilizers, 25 percent is fixed biologically through legumes and the remaining 36 percent of the soil's available nitrogen comes from the atmosphere, animal manures, rainfall, lightning, and crop residues.
- 1,112 million pounds of active ingredient pesticide was used in the U.S. in 1985. Of that amount, approximately 60 percent was in the classification called herbicides.
- Corn herbicides are the largest classification of pesticide, and warrent extra precaution.
- The number of pesticides introduced in the U.S. has dropped off. EPA records show a high point of pesticide registration in 1975, with 35 products receiving a federal label. In 1986-1988, only 11 products were registered each year. Many new products are blended products, such as Bicep, Bullet, Bronco, Extrazine, etc.
- There was a slight increase in nitrate levels for 1973 and 1989.
- If voluntary efforts fail to achieve significant reduction in nutrient loading, soil erosion, and animal waste control, mandatory requirements will be implemented. Legislation begins when voluntary efforts are ineffective.
- Applying less than labeled rate herbicide is possible while still maintaining adequate weed control. Additional tillage practices, such as cultivation, are required as lower rates of herbicide are used.

Reducing nutrient loads by 40 percent is a "very aggressive goal," said Brubaker. "And agriculture is being examined to make sure it can come up with its contribution. I think what agriculture needs to do is make sure the general public understands that. I think it's making a very strong commitment to try to achieve that kind of goal."

Brubaker said that farmers "are generally environmentalists as well — they're very, very concerned. What they're doing to their own land is their own land. They don't want to pollute their own well, and they don't want to pollute their neighbor's area.

"A lot of the people that farm in this area are relatively conservative, aren't the kind of people that stand up real quick at a meeting and voice their concerns. But that needs to change. We need to talk a lot more pro-agriculture.

"Individuals within the agricultural industry must be willing to join forces to help to build a successful, strong alliance. Whether this alliance is formed from an existing association or a brand new one, it must deal with sensitive environmental issues facing agriculture, as well as the profitability of farming."

Department Changes Name

NEWARK, Del. — On May 16, the University of Delaware board of trustees confirmed a resolution to change the name of the department of plant science to the department of plant and soil sciences.

The name change was previously approved by dean of the College of Agricultural Sciences, Dr. Donald F. Crossan, Acting Provost Dr. Richard B. Murray, and former University President E. Arthur Trabant.

According to Dr. Donald L. Sparks, chair of the department, the name now reflects the major thrusts of research being conducted in the department.

"Our department's research is in two areas: plant improvement and soil science," Sparks said. "Over the last 10 years, we've doubled the faculty in the soils area. It seems appropriate that the name of the department reflects the research of the faculty."

The department offers master's and doctorate degrees in the areas of plant and soil science. In addition, the soils program has attracted a number of postdoctoral fellows and visiting professors.

Sparks says a primary soil science research focus is environmental quality. He notes that considerable extramural funding has been in the soils area. Sparks' goals for the department include attracting more extramural funding and increasing interaction with the industrial sector and with other departments and colleges in the university.

COMPARE THESE FEATURES AND OPTIONS

Simple hydraulics allows one valve to operate the lift and stabilizer cylinders. Center plumbing means less hose length and easier coupling

The basic box is heavy-duty steel welded seams, and reinforced for even more strength.

Standard offset hitch adjusts in 6-inch steps to lengths from 6'3" to 7'11". To allow for different row crop spacings, you can offset either right or left 5, 7½, 10 or 12½ inches

Rub rails offer more protection to vehicles when approaching, during dumping cycle, and when departing.

Stabilizer cylinders hydraulically lock on to axle to hold wagon rigid during dump cycle.

Galvanized roof features vent insert for straight-through air flow

The model 700 dump wagon is designed for years of trouble free service. The hydraulic system with a cable assist is designed to unload large loads of up to 20 000 lbs quickly and efficiently even if the load is not distributed evenly

RICHARDTON

Make your operation safer • Use year round • Variety of crops • All field conditions • Operate in wet and muddy

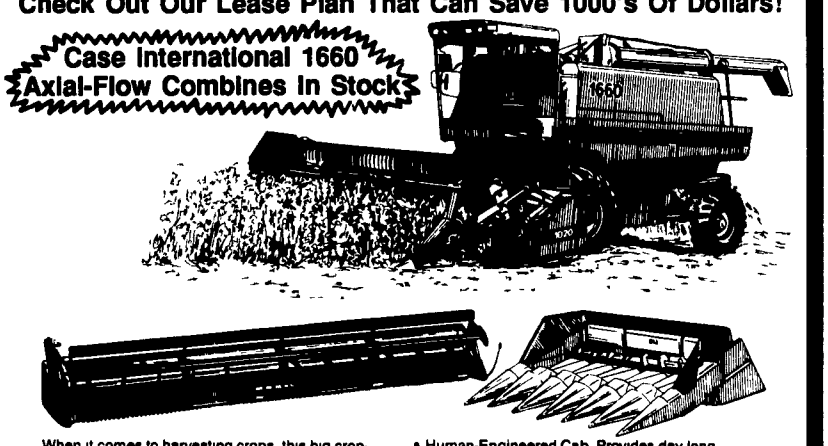
Case International 1660 Axial-Flow Combines In Stock



When it comes to harvesting crops, this big crop-saver can save more grain than other combines in its size class. It has the muscle to "get in and get out" fast to make the most of each day of good harvesting weather. It consistently turns out cleaner grain so you can get top market price. Put a 1660 to work and take advantage of these field-proven features.

- Axial-Flow Design. Uses a single rotor with fewer moving parts and fewer problems than conventional combines using the cylinder-and-concave design. Its more gentle threshing action means less cracked grain and top price for every bushel.
- Human-Engineered Cab. Provides day-long comfort for increased operator productivity.
- 180 hp Turbocharged Diesel and 3-Speed Hydrostatic Transmission. Plenty of power to handle soft soils and hilly terrain.
- 1015 Pickup Header. Available in 11- and 13-foot widths. Hydraulic variable speed drive lets you match crop pickup to ground speed for smooth delivery with minimum shattering.
- 1010 Rigid and 1020 Flexible Cutterbar Direct Cut Headers also available in several widths from 15 to 30 feet depending on model.
- 1000 Series Corn Heads in four to eight row sizes.

The 1660 Axial-Flow Combine . . . a generation ahead.

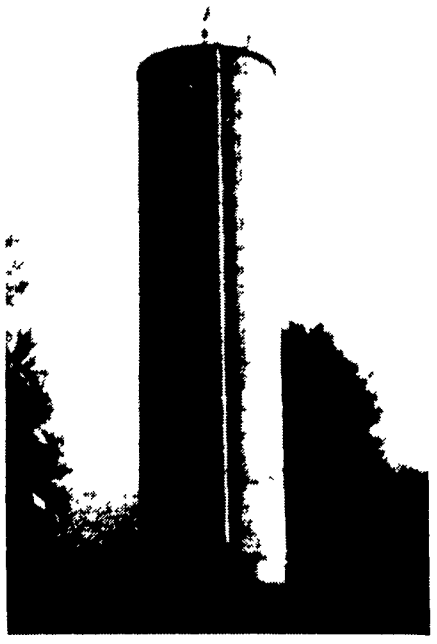
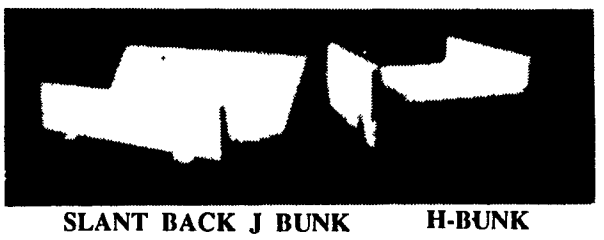
"Consider The Concrete Advantages"

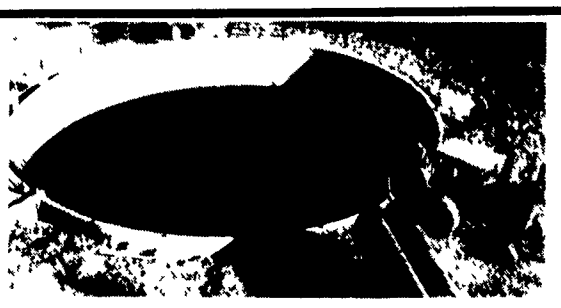


The best storage system for high moisture cob corn is a poured concrete SOLLENBERGER SILO, with bottom unloading. The feed can be safely stored at less than 30% moisture, air is effectively excluded limiting mold growth, the silo is equipped with a distributor to keep separation to a minimum which means more efficient unloading and consistent ration. The 6" solid concrete wall reflects heat meaning that heat damage is minimized and feed is kept cooler. Now Is "Decision Time". Make Plans Now To Have Your Sollenberger Silo Erected In Time To Store Your High Moisture Ground Ear Corn.



SLANT BACK J BUNK H-BUNK

Let Us Know Your Needs. We Can Deliver From Our Large Inventory And Set On Your Prepared Site. OR: We Can Load On Your Truck To Help Save On Freight Costs. We Have Several Sizes And Styles To Choose From, Plus Metal Posts, For Cable, Which Can Be Bolted To The Bunk To Keep Cattle Out.



MANURE STORAGE SYSTEMS

- Manure Storage Systems For The Small Herd - or The 400 Cow Herds And Larger.
- Systems Adaptable To Any Type Equipment
- SCS Approved
- Circular Tanks Poured-In-Place Above Ground - In Ground - Or Uneven Backfill.
- Pre-Cast Concrete panels Delivered And Set On Your Prepared Site.

CONSIDER THE ADVANTAGES OF HIGH MOISTURE EAR CORN

Farmers who use ground shelled corn rather than ground ear corn when putting up high moisture corn (HMC) are not only leaving the cob in the field, but they are leaving at least $150. worth of milk per acre of corn in the field.

These remarks were made by Dr. Howard Larson, noted Mid-Western dairy nutritionist and management specialist.

Further comments based upon years of research included:

* Any amount of cob is better than none.
* It is not economically feasible nor best for the cow to feed high moisture shelled corn.
* It is not necessary to feed hay to dairy cows.

When cob is included with the grian, you not only get an extra 10 to 12 percent HMC by weight, but you get better digestibility in your cows. By adding the cob to the ration, you keep a floor of fiber under the total ration and fiber can supply a lot of energy; and you get better rumen action.

WARNING, ALL SILO OWNERS

Check Your Silo Now For Rotten Staves. If You Have Been Using Your Silo For 10 To 15 Years For Either Corn Silage Or Haylage, It Is Time To SHOTCRETE.

Check Your Silo For Deteriorated Concrete!

If you have a 15 year old silo... get it fixed or insure it better! But don't wait until the last minute to have it repaired because we may not be able to fix it if you wait too long.

REMEMBER your silo will not fall over when it's empty - it will fall over when it's full. It cannot stand on deteriorated concrete...

Swine producers sometimes have the choice of more than one drug in the same category. For example — oxytetracycline and chlortetracycline.

Sulfamethazine and sulfathiazole. Lutalyse (which contains prostaglandin) and Bovilene (recently approved for swine, which contains a prostaglandin analogue). Which drug, within a category, is the best choice — or doesn't it matter?

OXYTETRACYCLINE VS. CHLORTETRACYCLINE

When you look at the chemical structure of these two drugs, it's hard to see the difference at first glance. Chlortetracycline has a chloride group (-Cl) attached to one part of the molecule. Oxytetracycline has no chloride, but instead has a hydroxyl group (-OH) attached to different part of the molecule. Other than that, the two drugs are identical.

Feed grade chlortetracycline can be purchased under various trade names, including Aureomycin and CTC. Trade names for oxytetracycline include Terramycin, TM, Oxytetracycline, and Oxytet. Both drugs can be added to the feed or water (provided they're in the correct form). Injectable forms are always oxytetracycline.

Do the two drugs act any differently in the pig? American Cyanamid Company (which produces Aureomycin) recently sent some swine producers results of a trial in which pigs were medicated through the water with either chlortetracycline or oxytetracycline. Their data showed higher levels of chortetracycline in the blood and the lungs compared to that of oxytetracycline.

Other research demonstrates that adding the two drugs to the feed also results in higher blood levels of chortetracycline than oxytetracycline — whether added at the rate of 200, 400, or 800 grams per ton. So from the standpoint of blood concentrations, and perhaps levels in the lungs, chlortetracycline seems to have the edge.

But oxytetracycline has a potential advantage when administered in the water, although both are approved at similar levels. (Chlortetracycline can be added to water at the rate of 200 mg/gallon. Oxytetracycline can be added at the rate of 200 to 400 mg/gallon.)

Data from several studies show that oxytetracycline is stable over a wide range of pH when administered in water. From pH 2 to 5, chlortetracycline is also stable. But at pH 5, chortetracycline begins to lose its stability, with only 80 percent of the drug remaining intact at pH 6, and roughly half of the drug at pH 8. (Most well water from some soils will have a pH of at least 7.)

Chortetracycline is also bound more readily by calcium in the diet. A recent trial at South Dakota State University showed that changing from a low-calcium (0.6 percent Ca) to a high-calcium (0.9 percent Ca) diet caused blood levels of chlortetracycline to fall from 0.230 to 0.095 ug/ml — a drop of nearly 60 percent.

Under the same conditions, oxytetracycline fell from 0.117 to 0.092 ug/ml — a 21 percent drop. But you'll notice that even though chortetracycline fell to a greater extent, the absolute levels of chlortetracycline were still higher (0.095 ug/ml) than that of oxytetracycline (0.092 ug/ml).

What does all of this mean in terms of treating disease in pigs? It's clear that both drugs are effective. Literally dozens of trials have proved that. But if you make a side-by-side comparison of oxytetracycline and chlortetracycline, which drug boosts hog performance the most?

I asked the same question, in a recent computer library search covering the last 20 years of published studies. I couldn't find a single report that made this comparison with pigs. Until we get that data, there is little justification for choosing one over the other.

SULFAMETHAZINE VS. SULFATHIAZOLE

Hog producers have a number of sulfas at their disposal. The two most widely used forms have traditionally been sulfamethazine (included in ASP-250 and Tylan plus Sulfa) and sulfathiazole (included in CSP-250).

Sulfamethazine has been under fire in recent years because of residue problems in pork, veal, and even milk. According to the Food Safety Inspection Service (FSIS), nearly all of the sulfa residue violations in pork between 1983 and 1986 occurred with sulfamethazine. During this four-year period, violative levels of sulfamethazine were found in 4 to 6 percent of the tissues sampled. In those same samples, not a single violation of sulfathiazole was detected. Why? Reportedly, sulfamethazine is absorbed and retained in both blood and tissues at higher levels than that of sulfathiazole.

That, according to some individuals, makes sulfamethazine a better drug. But many studies dispute that claim. A report from the University of Tennessee (1982) showed that CSP-250 was equal to ASP-250 in controlling Bordatella Bronchiseptica infections (atrophic rhinitis). A study by American Cyanamid (1984) showed CSP-250 gave slightly better control of the same disease compared to that of ASP-250. And a report just released by Fermenta demonstrated that CSP-250 and ASP-250 both improved weight gain and feed efficiency to the same extent in pigs infected with Bordatella and Pasteurella. The number of positive nasal swabs (for both Bordatella and Pasteurella) was lower in the CSP-250 group.

So there is little logic for using sulfamethazine. For whatever reasons, its use has created more violative residues than all the other sulfas combined. And its effectiveness in controlling disease and improving performance appears to be the same as that of sulfathiazole.

LUTALYSE VS. BOVILENE VS. ESTRUMATE

Though the names wouldn't give you a clue, all these products contain similar compounds.

Lutalyse (produced by Upjohn) contains prostaglandin F-2 alpha. About 7 years ago it was approved for the purpose of inducing farrowing in sows. This is the same compound involved in the natural onset of parturition.

New Egg Regs Affect Producers

COLLEGE PARK, Md. — Since 1969, Maryland honey producers have had to comply with a registration program for their bee colonies to help control the spread of American foulbrood and other bee maladies.

In a similar vein, the state's egg producers are now being asked to comply with a registration program for their poultry flocks. The new rules and regulations became effective in April. Large commercial producers already are complying; but operators with small, backyard flocks may not be aware of recent modifications to the 1957 Maryland Egg Law.

For that reason, information leaflets and registration applications are being made available at county offices of the University of Maryland Cooperative Extension Service. Compliance enforcement is a joint effort of the Maryland Department of Agriculture and the state Department of Health and Mental Hygiene.

Dr. John A. Doerr, acting chairperson for poultry science on the University of Maryland campus at College Park, notes that the new rules have a twofold purpose:

- To instill consumer confidence that Maryland eggs are wholesome and safe.
- To provide a mechanism for tracking down sources of contamination and helping affected producers clear up potential disease problems at an early stage.

Doerr explains that the regulations apply to any person who sells eggs — whether one or a million — to retail outlets, distributors, restaurants, or directly to consumers. A three-step procedure is required. It involves registration, carbon imprinting, and maintenance of invoices or sales slips.

Registration forms must be sent to the Maryland Department of Agriculture in Annapolis. They are available from county extension offices throughout the state, along with a brochure explaining the new egg law requirements. Upon receipt of the completed application form, MDA officials will issue a registration number. This number must be printed on all egg cartons sold.

In addition to the registration number, cartons must be identified as containing eggs; they must be imprinted with the seller's name and address, lot number, or date eggs were packed; number of eggs in the carton; and grade and size of eggs, along with instructions to keep eggs refrigerated.

A sales slip or invoice must be provided, and copies retained for at least 90 days. The invoice must include name and address of both buyer and seller, date of delivery, grade and size of eggs, lot number or date of packing, and seller's registration number. These last two items may be included on a packing slip inside the case, instead of on the invoice.

Dr. Charles J. Wabeck, poultry products specialist at Princess Anne for the University of Maryland Cooperative Extension Service, commented about the new regulations:

- If you purchase eggs for resale, get a copy of the producer's Maryland registration or plant number.
- When buying layer flock replacements, be sure to request a Pullorum-Typhoid clean flock certificate from the breeder.

Your Maryland Cooperative Extension Service agricultural agent can provide assistance in filling out the registration form, imprinting egg cartons, and preparing sales slips or invoices. The Maryland Department of Agriculture also stands ready to assist egg producers.

Grange Supports Farm Product Damage Bill

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The incident of crop damage caused by wildlife, especially the growing population of deer in rural Pennsylvania, is potentially devastating to farmers.

The Pennsylvania State Grange, which represents 42,000 rural Pennsylvanians, is greatly concerned with the recurring crop loss that farmers must face.

The Grange supports SB 647, which allows farmers to obtain a farm product damage control permit. That permit would give a farmer the ability to have people not associated with the farm help control the wildlife between August and October. Currently only farmers, their families, and hired help are permitted to eliminate damaging wildlife.

"Giving the farmers this additional help with the task of saving their crops until the harvest is over is an important measure," said Brenda Shambaugh, Pennsylvania State Grange legislative director. "Farmers can lose a substantial amount of income by these animals, which destroy crops by eating and trampling."

The bill would require that farmers have at least $500 of crop damage to qualify for the permit. It would also require that a game officer be notified when shooting is planned. In addition, the property for which the permit is sought must have been accessible by the public for hunting during the current or previous year.

BIRD COMFORT DURING HOT WEATHER

Forest Muir
Professor of Poultry Science

A properly serviced and operated ventilation system is important for maintaining bird comfort during hot weather.

Bird comfort is one of the keys to efficient productivity. The three components of the ventilation system which must be serviced for summer conditions are the inlets, fans, and controls.

The inlets are the entry point of fresh air into the poultry house. Air inlet openings should be covered with screening of a size that will prevent wild birds from entering the building. This screening will catch dust, feathers, and other debris.

This material will not normally fall away from the screening but only serve as an obstruction to entrap additional material. Sufficient air flow can enter the poultry building through dusty inlets to maintain desired temperatures during spring conditions. However, a proper building environment cannot be maintained during hot weather with dirty inlets. The inlet screening should be cleaned and maintained dust-free to allow maximum air flow when needed.

Fans are the heart of the ventilation system. Establish a schedule for servicing the fans. The servicing schedule should be more frequent during the summer months. Proper fan maintenance includes:

- Checking to make certain all fans are operational and have been lubricated, if required.
- Cleaning the fan blades, orifices, and motors.
- Cleaning and lubricating (using graphite) the fan louvers.
- Adjusting belt tension and replacing belts when necessary.
- Stocking spare replacement fan belts.

Proper fan maintenance can increase the air delivery capacity of a fan by as much as 30-40 percent.

Dust should be removed from the sensing units of thermostats. Dust on sensing units can act as an insulating agent and reduce thermostat sensitivity.

Most poultry air inlet systems are regulated by automatic inlet controllers. These controllers use a manometer as the sensing device. The manometer in these units should be serviced. This includes checking the fluid level and calibrating the zero setting.

Adjust the automatic inlet controller to maintain a 0.04-0.06 static pressure in the building. A static pressure of 0.04-0.06 inches of water translates to an air speed of 800-1,000 feet per minute at the inlet.

Increasing the static pressure will increase the air speed at the inlet but will not necessarily increase the amount of air entering the building. In fact, increasing the static pressure may actually decrease the quantity of air entering the building. The increase in static pressure causes the fans to work harder and can reduce the amount of air that they move. An increase in air speed at the inlet can also change distribution patterns in the building and actually create hot spots.

Pork Prose

The strategy is to inject it 1 to 2 days before the expected farrowing date to induce most of the sows to farrow during daylight hours. Obviously breeding dates are a must and even average gestation length for your herd will help.

Inducing farrowing by more than 2 days before the natural date will decrease baby pig survival rates.

Bovilene (produced by Syntex Animal Health), for a number of years, has been labeled for aborting feedlot heifers. It contains fenprostalene, a synthetic compound similar to prostaglandin. A few months ago it was approved for use in sows to induce farrowing. Unfortunately, at this writing, the label on Bovilene says nothing about sows, which leaves producers in the dark as to the proper dosage.

According to a technical services representative from Syntex, the suggested dosage for sows will be 0.5 to 1 cc per head, with the 1 cc dose reportedly providing more uniformity in response. The cost of Bovilene is roughly $1.25 to $1.50 per cc, which is similar to that of Lutalyse on a per-sow basis.

The one advantage Bovilene offers is a reduction in side effects. After injecting Lutalyse, many sows exhibit temporary restlessness, bar biting, scratching, increased body temperature, increased respiratory rate, and nesting behavior.

Estrumate. Estrumate (produced by Haver) contains chloprostenol, a prostaglandin analogue. And although it was never approved for use in sows, many producers have used it to induce farrowing. Like Bovilene, it works, but without the side effects observed with Lutalyse.

What should you use to induce farrowing? Both Lutalyse and Bovilene work effectively. The cost is similar. But I suspect that since many producers used Estrumate, which was never legal, they will switch to Bovilene (once the label is changed) to avoid the side effects.

SUMMARY

1. Chlortetracycline and oxytetracycline have almost identical structures. Treating pigs with chlortetracycline will provide higher levels in the blood compared to oxytetracycline administered under the same conditions. However, chlortetracycline is less stable at neutral or higher pH when used in water medicators. Both drugs work. Both cost about the same. But since we don't have good comparative performance data, there is little justification for choosing one over the other.

2. Until the recent drop in its use, sulfamethazine had created a multitude of residue problems for the pork industry. Sulfathiazole has had few if any residue problems. Since it appears to work as effectively as does sulfamethazine, sulfathiazole is clearly the drug of choice for producers who use sulfas.

3. For inducing farrowing, Bovilene and Lutalyse are both effective and cost about the same. Once Bovilene is marketed with a swine label, many producers will undoubtedly use it because of the low incidence of side effects.

PRODUCTION PRACTICES FOR RAISING FREEZER BEEF

There are some distinct differences in production practices that can be used when raising beef cattle for direct marketing of beef to consumers. With a relatively large suburban population in close proximity to beef feeders, the opportunity to use direct marketing of beef is available.

Before trying any direct marketing, or freezer beef, production it is important to do a little homework about this program. You should carefully study the size of the market in your locality, what kind of consumers are likely to buy the product, the quality and location of local beef processors, and any special production practices you may want or need to use.

For the latter, there are some sizeable local markets for specialty beef, such as "lean," "hormone-free," or for beef with special packaging. If you wish to use a label on your beef (such as "Sunny Farms Extra Lean") to help merchandise it, make sure you are meeting USDA requirements for the label.

For example, USDA does not recognize the terms "organic" or "residue-free" on these labels. You can get this information by calling Dr. Royce Harr at 9202) 447-2807.

Two of the fundamental needs for freezer beef production are appropriate carcass size and eating quality. The former seems to be easily controlled; that is, you simply slaughter the animal when they reach the right weight. However, because eating quality is closely related to the weight and the days on feed, it is not so simple.

Size is important for a couple of reasons. First, many consumers find it too expensive to make a purchase of a side of beef that weighs more than 300 pounds. The amount of fat in the carcass will also tend to increase as the weight gets larger. Secondly, individual portion sizes from cuts in a large carcass are too big, particularly for steaks. This may result in steaks cut thinner, which makes them harder to cook and possibly less desirable. The maximum live weight on a steer to meet this size requirement would be about 1,000 to 1,100 pounds.

Consumers usually demand a product that is lean, tender, and flavorful. Research has shown that the only carcass trait related to these factors is marbling, or the intramuscular fat in the ribeye. However, that relationship is fairly small, so other factors in freezer beef may be more important. We will examine how breeds, sex, management, and nutrition would effect the size and quality of the carcass.

The breed will be the most important factor in carcass size when there is a standard endpoint such as fat thickness or grade. Breed selection should be based on one of the more important factors in the market.

For example, if the market is for a fairly high quality product (Choice grade or better) within the constraints of carcass size, then the list of possible breeds gets smaller. In this case, beef breeds such as Angus or Red Poll would fit the requirements.

In addition, dairy breeds such as Jersey and Holstein may work with some special consideration given to the nutrition program. In another example, the quality grade may not be as important as meeting the size requirement with a very lean product. In this case breeds such as Limousin, Gelbvieh, or Salers may be more desirable.

Finally, where neither size nor quality grade would be important, a very lean, but larger carcass can be produced from breeds such as Chianina, Charolais, and Simmental. Under most conditions, research has not shown breed to be a major factor in palatability characteristics of meat, so using the breed to meet weight standards would be effective.

Calf sex is another effective tool to use to meet the market standards. In general, heifers of a breed will weigh about 150 pounds less at a given endpoint than their steer counterpoints. Therefore, where size and quality are important factors, it would be effective to use heifers in the feeding program.

Feeding bulls will improve feedlot performance and increase the lean in the carcass, but will reduce the marbling score and cause more "nuisance" problems in the feedlot. Again, research has shown bull beef to have little disadvantage to steer beef when both were fed in the same way.

In one particular study, there was no difference found in the eating quality of bull or steer beef when they were fed for either 60 or 90 days, with the exception of flavor in the bulls fed for 90 days.

Management programs will again be dictated by the market. The use of growth-promoting implants, feed additives, and legal drugs for treatment of illness would certainly be recommended where no bias exists in the market for these products. In fact, the use of implants would be a particular advantage when marbling and quality grade are of lesser importance.

In general, these products will keep a steer leaner to a heavier weight, and the greater daily gains and feed efficiency will be captured. Feed additives such as monensin or lasalocid are not permitted under some merchandising labels, but are perfectly safe to use in most feeding programs to increase feed efficiency.

It is important to realize that, when producing for some specialized markets, such as those those not using implants or additives, there will be an increase in production costs of 10-20 percent. The feeder must be able to recover this loss with a higher value for the product.

An important aspect of eating quality for any carcass is the nutrition program where it was produced. Fat color is one factor. Usually fat should be white or only slightly yellow for most consumers. Yellow fat tends to be more oily and less desirable and is sometimes accompanied by off-flavors in the meat.

The feeder should remember the higher percentage of fresh, green forage there is in the diet, the more yellow the fat will be. If cattle are to be fed for a short period of time and the ration has been almost entirely grass, it will take 45-60 days on a grain diet to reduce the yellow in the fat. If silage or haylage is a high percentage of the feedlot ration, it will take at least 90 days to improve flavor and fat color.

Another nutrition factor is when feeding dairy steers. Holstein steers, for example, will grade Choice consistently at 1,050-1,150 pounds if their diet has been at least 90 percent concentrates. This is particularly true if they have been fed high amounts of corn from birth. As the proportion of forage is increased in the diet, particularly before 500 pounds and after 800 pounds in weight, quality grade will be reduced and slaughter weight will increase.

Finally, it is essential in a freezer beef feeding program to know the age of the animals at purchase. One of the most offending characteristics to many consumers is tough meat. While it is somewhat genetically controlled, the age of the animal will have an important effect on tenderness. Calves should be slaughtered at 16 months of age or less to insure age will not effect the tenderness of the beef.

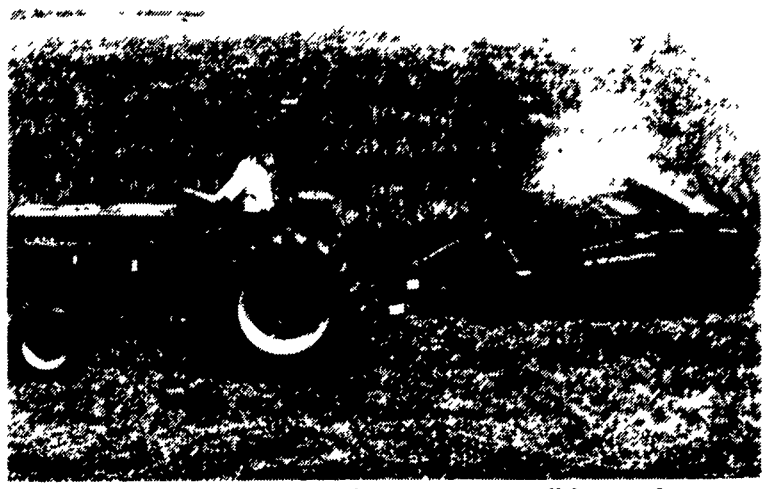
Mower-Conditioner Now With Cash Incentive

RACINE, WI — Hay and forage growers who buy a Case International 8320, 8330, or 8340 mower-conditioner between May 1 and July 31 get not only a reliable, fast-cutting machine, but $300 cash in their pockets.

"Those who purchase Case International mower-conditioners are really getting rugged, high-quality machines that will provide years of dependable service at a very favorable price," said Roger Strome, J I Case manager of marketing analysis, hay and forage products. "This promotion will allow us the opportunity to meet new customers who may never have considered Case International when purchasing smaller-sized mower-conditioners."

Case International sicklebar mower-conditioners feature a uniform-motion sickle drive that provides smooth, fast cutting even in heavy crops. Wide, intermeshing conditioning rolls save nutritious leaves and assure quick dry-down.



Case International sicklebar mower-conditioners feature a uniform-motion sickle drive for smooth, fast cutting.

"With a cutting width of 7 feet, 3 inches for the 8320, and 9 feet, 3 inches for the 8330 and deluxe 8340, these mower-conditioners are designed for the small- and moderate-sized producer who faces a wide variety of crop conditions," Strome said. On all models, a sturdy, L-shaped frame supports and suspends the header so that it is pushed through the field rather than pulled. Fully adjustable header flotation allows the header to follow ground contours for close cutting and top performance.

The Case International mower-conditioner line also includes the larger 8350, 8360, 8370, and 8380 models, as well as the 3309 disc mower-conditioner.

Making poultry safer by destroying Salmonella and other bacteria is the aim of research conducted by Dr. James Heath and laboratory scientist Sandy Owens. The scientists expose processed chicken to a high-energy electron beam, and then inoculate laboratory plates to check for bacterial survival. Photo by Norman E. Pruitt, Maryland Ag Experiment Station.

Electron Beam Makes Poultry Supply Safer

COLLEGE PARK, Md. — electron-beam accelerator kills or significantly damages most of the bacteria responsible for spoilage or human disease.

But Heath cautions that, like pasteurized milk, chicken irradiated before leaving the processing plant still must be refrigerated to inhibit the growth of any remaining bacteria. Consumers must then thoroughly cook the chicken to destroy harmful bacteria.

Heath lists several benefits offered by irradiation, including a safer, longer shelf life.

"In our laboratory, we've extended poultry's shelf life up to 60 days under refrigeration," he said. "Currently, supermarket shelf life is 4 to 10 days, depending on the product."

This extended life gives processors more time to deliver poultry products, and gives consumers a longer opportunity to select good, wholesome poultry products. But this extended life is also good news for the exporting of Maryland chicken, the state's leading agricultural product.

Irradiation can make Maryland chicken more competitive in foreign markets, since it could be shipped fresh instead of frozen, Heath said. As is the case in the United States, foreign consumers dislike frozen chicken.

Heath emphasizes that an educational program will be needed to reassure consumers that this use of irradiation is safe.

"One of the problems with consumer acceptance of irradiation is that it's been ingrained in us since the 1950s that irradiation is a bad and dangerous thing. We need to reassure consumers that it's a perfectly safe process under the guidelines established by the FDA."

Twelve to 36 hours after eating contaminated food, you develop such symptoms as diarrhea, abdominal pain, and fever. Lasting two or three days, these are signs that Salmonella or other harmful bacteria have struck again.

There were 1,495 cases of Salmonella infection reported in Maryland in 1989, according to Maryland's Department of Health and Mental Hygiene. Proper cooking kills these bacteria. But a recent U.S. Food and Drug Administration (FDA) decision may ensure that poultry products, one possible haven for these bacteria, are largely free of Salmonella before they reach the home refrigerator.

The FDA in early May approved the use of irradiation — exposing poultry to small doses of radiation — to control Salmonella and other bacteria contaminants. For the past 3-½ years, Agricultural Experiment Station poultry scientist Dr. James Heath has been bombarding chicken with high energy electrons — natural, charged particles that are present in all atoms.

The FDA decision allows the use of two kinds of irradiation — gamma and electron beam, said Heath. Irradiation is already approved by FDA for the insect disinfestation of grains and spices, for insect control in fresh fruits and vegetables, and for the control of trichina in pork. More than 30 countries have approved and are using food irradiation, including 12 that have approved irradiation use on poultry.

Heath estimates that 10 to 40 percent of chicken is contaminated with Salmonella or other harmful bacteria when it reaches the consumer. By destroying key enzymes, irradiation from an

Gehl Has Strong First Quarter

WEST BEND, Wis. — A healthy agricultural economy, increased penetration into the light industrial and construction equipment market, and strong export sales drove record first quarter sales and net income for Gehl Company. The capital goods manufacturer became publicly owned in November 1989.

First quarter net income grew 54 percent to a record $1.3 million from the $847,000 the company earned in the same period a year ago, according to President and Chief Executive Officer Bernard L. Nielsen. Sales for the first quarter increased 15 percent to $39 million, compared to $34 million in 1989.

Earnings per share were $.22, up 5 percent over the $.21 per share in the first quarter of 1989. The percent increase in earnings per share was lower than net income growth due to the higher number of outstanding shares after the initial public offering.

"Our strong first quarter performance shows that we are well positioned to take advantage of the favorable trends in the markets we serve," said Nielsen.

"Dairy and beef prices are strong, bolstering demand for our broad line of agricultural implements. The light industrial and construction market, while flat, is benefiting from the versatility of equipment such as our telescoping-boom forklifts and skid steer loaders. We are also seeing growing international demand for our equipment, especially in Europe and Canada.

"We achieved our first quarter results despite start-up delays in a new computerized manufacturing support system and some material delays. Based on improving internal operations and our positioning to capitalize on favorable trends within our industries, we expect a good second quarter," said Nielsen.

Gehl Company backlog of orders at March 31, 1990 remained strong at $50.7 million despite record shipments during the quarter. While the backlog is lower than the $55.3 million backlog of one year ago, it reflects changes in production and wholesale financing policies that tend to reduce peak levels of backlog but provide for balanced inventory, manpower and material requirements.

Fruit Meeting

SCHUYLKILL HAVEN (Schuylkill Co.) — Fruit growers and individuals interested in growing fruit are invited to a twilight meeting sponsored by the Penn State cooperative extension.

Dr. Larry Hull, Penn State entomologist at the Biglerville Research Lab, will discuss chemical issues and an update on the insect and mite situation. Dr. George Greene, Penn State pomologist at the Biglerville Research Lab, will cover the latest culture practices for today's orchards. Dr. John Halbrendt, Penn State nematologist, will discuss nematode management in the orchard.

The meeting will be held Tuesday, June 5 at 6:30 p.m. at the Robert Dunn orchard, New Ringgold. This meeting will qualify for credits toward pesticide recertification.

Multi-Leaflet Alfalfa Gains Acceptance

GOLDEN VALLEY, MN — With the promise of improved quality and high yields, multi-leaflet alfalfas are rapidly gaining momentum among growers.

"We've seen a lot of grower interest in multi-leaflet alfalfas," said Jan Johnson, alfalfa product manager for Northrup King. "In its introductory year, supplies of our new multi-leaflet variety quickly sold out."

Multi-leaflet varieties are relatively new in the alfalfa seed business. They have the potential to produce as many as nine leaflets per leaf. Standard trifoliate varieties produce only three.

Northrup King has increased seed production and expects full supplies to be available for the 1991 growing season. But growers buying seed will note a change from last season.

In 1990, Northrup King marketed its new multi-leaflet alfalfa under the name Multi-Leaf 1. From now on seed will be sold as MultiKing 1.

"Although we had done a search on the old name, it turns out that Cornell University had used the name in the early 1980s and wanted to reserve its use," Johnson said. "That meant we needed a new name."

MultiKing 1 represents the next generation of superior multi-leaflet lines. It genetically carries the multi-leaflet trait and yields well.

"We developed a first generation multi-leaflet several years ago but decided to wait until we had a more advanced one that would be significantly better," Johnson said.

"MultiKing 1 offers a quality edge to top forage managers because there is a higher leaf-to-stem ratio and higher relative feed value. MultiKing 1 has a higher leaf-to-stem ratio than trifoliates and expresses that trait more consistently than other multi-leaflets," said Johnson.

Northrup King is a leading developer and marketer of alfalfa, corn, soybean, and sorghum varieties.

Ag Field Day Features Clean Environment

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — On June 20, 1990, a field day featuring Profitable Farming and A Clean Environment will be held at the Russell E. Larson Agricultural Research Center at Rock Springs. The program will feature tours, displays, and clinics of interest to farm, non-farm, and urban participants.

Tour topics include manure management, Pennsylvania soil characteristics in relation to nutrient and pesticide retention, tillage techniques for decreased erosion, and runoff and herbicide reduction procedures. Sessions also will focus on integrated pest management and scouting to determine pest populations, as well as efficient nitrogen practices and economic and labor considerations when planning a crop program to reduce chemical applications.

The tours will begin at 1:00 p.m., followed by dinner at 5:00 p.m. Dinner presentations led by representatives from government and production agriculture will relate to farming and the environment.

Twilight tours and farmer clinics have been scheduled from 7:00 p.m. to 8:30 p.m. The tours will offer an overview of the afternoon presentations for the non-farm participants, while the clinics will feature hands-on nitrogen testing, scouting, and field-problem identification. Exhibits will highlight water quality, crop records, expert systems, and geographic information systems.

"This program reflects major changes from previous days at the research farm," said Elwood Hatley, professor of agronomy and field day publicity chairman. "I believe it will interest farmers, agindustry personnel, and hopefully our non-farm neighbors. It's an opportunity to showcase research and educational programs affecting production agriculture and the environment."

The Russell E. Larson Center is located nine miles southwest of State College, and includes research farms for horticulture, agronomy, plant pathology, and entomology. It is also the site of Ag Progress Days, the Pasto Agricultural Museum, and the Clark Kerr Apple Museum.

For more information about the Agronomy Field Day, or to secure dinner reservations, contact the Penn State cooperative extension office in your county or phone the Penn State department of agronomy extension at (814) 865-2543.

Produce Auction Opens June 8

ANNAPOLIS, MD — The wholesale produce auction market at Cheltenham, Prince George's County, will open for business on Friday, June 8, according to Allen Swann, president of Southern Maryland Regional Farmers' market board.

"We will open for early season produce and sell one day a week, on Fridays, and then expand to sales on Mondays and Wednesday as produce availability warrants," said Swann. Sales will start at 11:30 a.m. each day.

In its first year of operation in 1989, the auction operated two days per week, running from July to October.

Buyers wanting up-to-date information on the market, and farmers with an interest in selling on the market, should contact Bruce Bagley, (301) 327-1066 or (800) 533-FARM (in 301 calling area) after May 15.
